George Rules Out Excess Profits Tax Action Now

There Will Be 'Interim Bill or Nothing', Chairman of Senate Finance Group Warns

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) last night declared in effect there will be no emergency tax legislation at all this session if an excess-profits levy is tied to the Administration's tax bill.

"There will be an interim tax bill or nothing," George said.

He said he would move to recommit the five-billion-dollar emergency tax bill if an excess-profits tax is superimposed on the Senate floor, "because we would have to hold hearings."

"You can't slap an excess-profits tax on top of a seven-percent increase in corporation income taxes without tying up this Congress indefinitely," he said.

"You can destroy our ecomony by taxation in wartime as well as in peace."

The Georgian struck out at a growing movement at the Capitol to tie an excess-profits tax to the President's bill even as Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder disavowed any intention of asking Congress for war-profits tax legislation before January.

Snyder stressed that the Administration is immediately concerned with swift passage of the President's "interim" tax bill. He disclosed that his Treasury staff is working on war profits tax legislation for possible future action, but not for inclusion in the pending measure.

George hit specifically at an excess-profits tax proposal of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) using 75 percent of business earnings in the years 1947-1949 as a base.

"The drive is not for an interim-profits tax," he said. "The real drive is for a permanent profits tax that would serve as a supertax in peacetime as well as in war."

Asked if he was referring to the O'Mahoney amendment, George replied, "Sure, that's what I'm talking about."

O'Mahoney immediately denied any intention of imposing a "permanent" excess-profits tax.

"The tax I am proposing is a Korean war tax and nothing else," said O'Mahoney. "It is only an interim proposal, and a mild one at that."

Reiterating his intention of pressing his amendment on the Senate floor, if the Finance Committee fails to approve it, O'Mahoney added:

"Any proposal to delay profits taxation until January is only a proposal to let inflation get a six months' head start. We had better catch up with inflation, or it will catch up with us.

Informed of the George and Snyder statements, Senator Connally (D., Tex.), said he still intends to move in committee to add

Lacks 'Confidence' in Him

AEC Manager Wilson Quits In Row With Chairman Dean

Figures in the Atomic Energy Commission organization blast

By The Associated Press

Carroll Wilson, general manager for the Atomic Energy Commission ever since the agency took over from the Army, quit yesterday in an explosive split with Chairman Gordon Dean.

Wilson issued a statement saying he lacked the "confidence" in Dean necessary to do the job properly. He questioned the chairman's experience and qualifications to head the huge task of developing atomic energy for war and peace.

Wilson's intention to quit, effective next Tuesday, first became known when the White House released an exchange of letters between him and President Truman. This correspondence did not disclose the reasons for the resignation, which Mr. Truman said he had "no alternative" but to accept.

Wilson then issued the statement outlining his reasons.

Dean told a reporter he had seen

Not "Helping Cause of Peace"

Wallace Quits Progressives Over Stand on Korean War

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Henry Wallace tonight pulled out of the Progressive Party, which was formed to run him for President in 1948.

The former Vice President and Secretary of Commerce wrote to C. B. Baldwin, Progressive Party secretary:

"In view of the actions recently taken by the National Committee of the Progressive Party and the various State committees, I am convinced that I can more effectively serve the cause of peace by resigning from the National Committee and the Executive Committee of the Progressive Party.

"You will therefore take this letter as my formal resignation from the party."

Wallace recently issued a statement that, although he was not condoning previous actions of either the United States or Russia, he must stand with his country and the United Nations on Korea.

The same day, the National Committee issued a statement opposing American intervention in Korea.

Since then, State party organizations have voted almost overwhelmingly to back up the National Committee.

At his South Salem, N. Y., farm home, Wallace said he had "no political plans whatsoever" for the immediate future.

"I resigned because I didn't feel the Progressive Party was helping the cause of peace."

Sen. Taylor Ahead in Early Idaho Vote

Leads Sen. Clark By 524-452 Votes In 53 Districts

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 8 (AP).—Senator Glen H. Taylor, who bolted to the Progressive Party two years ago, led in early returns tonight in his bid for Democratic renomination.

Former Senator D. Worth Clark, who accused Taylor of helping Communist-front organizations, trailed him closely. Veteran Congressman Compton I. White was third among the three candidates.

In the primary election voting today Idaho chose nominees for two Senate seats and all other major offices. Spirited campaigning and good weather brought out a heavy vote.

Republican Senator Henry C. Dworshak jumped ahead in early, slow counting. He sought nomination to the 4-year Senatorial term in a field of three.

Returns from 53 of 839 precincts gave Taylor 524, Clark 452 and White 255.

In 20 precincts Dworshak polled 1032 votes, Abe McGregor Goff, 520, and Fentress H. Kuhn 173.

Bolling Captain Killed in Nevada Airplane Crash

Las Vegas, Nev., Aug. 8 (AP).—Capt. Stephen R. Wheaton, assistant base operations officer at Bolling Air Force Base, was killed in the crash of his F-51 Mustang plane at Erie, Nev., 32 miles south of Las Vegas.

His widow, of 131 Park Road, Hartford, Conn., and his mother, Mrs. Alice Emery, 5 Sumner st., Bar Harbor, Me., survive.

The crash was discovered by a highway patrolman. The plane burned. Captain Wheaton's body was found near the wreckage.

For Handwriting Request

Dr. Davies Demands Apology From Morals Case Prosecutor

The Rev. Dr. A. Powell Davies demanded yesterday that a District prosecutor apologize for publicly requesting that he furnish a handwriting sample to aid police in determining authorship of two mysterious letters in a morals case.

Dr. Davies, minister of All Souls' Unitarian Church, directed his blast at Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King. It was King who made the request during proceedings Tuesday in Municipal Court against Robert Sneed Williams, jr., 45, who is awaiting sentence for indecently exposing himself to two teen-age girls last April near American University.

Williams, a former District schoolteacher, a wartime Naval officer, and now a lumber estimater, in a trustee of the All Souls' Church. Several fellow parishioners and Dr. Davies testified as character witnesses in behalf of Williams during the trial.

When informed of Dr. Davies' apology demand, King replied that he meant no discourtesy, but was merely attempting to prosecute the Williams case to the best of his ability.

His handwriting request to Dr. Davies was coupled with a similar request concerning all defense witnesses.

The letters were received by King after Williams' conviction. The writer said that he was the culprit in the case, and that Williams was innocent. But the letter-writer refused to identify himself after King publicly promised him immunity.

Dr. Davies, who is now vacationing, sent the newspapers the following statement about King:

"Dr. A. Powell Davies, minister of All Souls Unitarian Church, today issued the following statement in regard to the declaration of Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King that he would need handwriting samples and fingerprints of Dr. Davies and other

Truman Asks New Curbs On Spies

But Warns Congress Against the Dangers In Extreme Measures Of a 'Police State'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for stronger laws to deal with Communist spies and saboteurs.

At the same time, Mr. Truman warned against some of the legislation pending before Congress, saying that extremists wanted "police state measures."

"We must not be swept away by a wave of hysteria," he said in his message.

There were indications on Capitol Hill, however, that a substantial number of lawmakers might want to go beyond Mr. Truman's recommendations.

The Chief Executive asked Congress to remedy defects in existing laws and to enact new legislation so that spies, saboteurs and deportable aliens might better be dealt with. The effect would be to:

1. Extend the statute of limitations for peacetime espionage. It is now only three years.

2. Require persons who have been trained in espionage and subversive tactics by a foreign government to register with the Department of Justice under the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

3. Give the President broader authority than he now has to establish security regulations for the protection of military bases and other defense installations.

4. Permit the Attorney General to exercise supervision over aliens subject to deportation and to require them, under the sanction of criminal penalties, to report at regular intervals. As matters stand, many aliens under deportation orders cannot be deported because no other country will accept them.

The President's message was read to the Senate just as it was about to take up two bills on the consent calendar, one of them the Mundt-Ferguson-Nixon bill, which would require registration of Communist and Communist-front organizations. Under the rules, one objection can block consideration of a calendar bill.

House Group Votes Standby Controls Plan

Final Action Due In a Few Days On Proposed Curbs Truman Can Accept

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The House Banking Committee yesterday voted, 21 to 1, to back a standby price and wage control program acceptable to the Truman Administration.

In doing so, the committee sought, in the words of Chairman Spence (D., Ky.), to bring some "order out of the chaos" that last week left the House itself confused and exhausted.

While the committee met most of yesterday, the House itself took a breather from the controls problem. Today it will attempt to extricate itself from the tangle it was in when debate on the subject ended last Friday.

The nearly unanimous vote in committee indicated that a day or two more of floor consideration should—barring new upsets—produce a final vote. Only Representative Kunkel (R., Pa.) voted against the committee action yesterday, other members said. Representative Nicholson (R., Mass.) was reported as voting present.

The price and wage stabilization proposal agreed to was substantially the same as the one accepted Monday by the Senate Banking Committee. In fact, the House committee worked from the Senate's printed version.

The heart of the matter is that the plan gives the President extremely wide discretion in invoking extremely wide authority over both prices and wages. He is not compelled to act until he wants to.

Thus the committee action is expected to result today in the Battle in Korea

Own Planes Rip Hole in GI Line And the Enemy Pours Through

By Robert Bennyhoff

With the United States Twenty-fourth Infantry Division in Korea, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Naktong River bulge where the North Koreans hold a bridgehead within about 25 miles of Taegu exploded into flaming battle today.

Infantrymen who landed in Korea last week from the United States joined the battle-tested Nineteenth and Thirty-fourth Regiments of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division in an attempt to wipe out the enemy troops—now estimated to number up to 3000—in the bulge.

The battle see-sawed back and forth. Once early this afternoon the Americans had the North Koreans surrounded. They were squeezing them relentlessly back toward the river, along their 10-mile front.

Just then a formation of American planes came over. The fighting was at such close range that the planes mistook the Americans for North Koreans and opened a strafing attack on them as they moved up a hillside.

A gap was opened in the American lines. Enemy troops rushed through the gap. The enemy scored a considerable advance. The Nineteenth Regimental Command Post called on the artillery.

One of the most intensive bombardments of the war followed. The artillery poured shells into the forward North Korean positions within a few hundred feet of the Americans. Dust from the blasted ground blew back into the faces of the Yanks.

The reinforcements moved in and the gap in the lines was closed.

I watched the battle this afternoon. North Korean guns from the west side of the river joined those in the bulge in counter-battery work against the American artillery.

Down the hill from where I stood North Korean mortars, emplaced behind what appeared to be a schoolhouse, came under intense American artillery fire. The North Koreans suddenly stopped firing and started waving a white flag.

The officer directing the artillery hesitated, then gave the order to cease fire. He waited 10 minutes for the Reds to start coming into the lines. Instead they grabbed their mortars and ran to new positions.

"If that's the way they're going to play this is the last white flag we are going to respect," the officer said.

A bold Communist attempt to ferry supplies across the river was thwarted when American planes sank three large boats and two smaller ones.

But when the planes left the North Koreans got about two platoons, possibly 150 men, across the river. At nightfall the Americans had failed again to wipe out the enemy pocket, now three days in being, and it was expected that again the Reds would bring reinforcements across by night.

Marines Find First Action Worse Than Tarawa, Iwo Jima

By Marguerite Higgins

With American Marine Forward Units in Korea, Aug. 8 (NYHT).—The United States Marines took and held a new "bloody nose" ridge today in exhausting hill fighting from which survivors staggered back with the verdict: "This is worse than Tarawa or Iwo Jima."

The baking, relentless sun felled some of the toughest Marines of our battalion, who, in the struggle to gain their first assigned objective of this campaign, had to climb nearly sheer ridges rising thousands of feet out of the lush green valley.

The casualties included lacerations from falls down cliffs.

The unit I chose to follow into the initial stages of the battle was the first in the brigade to see action. As it clambered stony ridges to take over ground earlier relinquished by the Army, it got a full bitter taste of what it means to go into battle against a guerilla enemy skilled at mountain warfare.

Corp. L. Edwin Pemberton of Carlsbad, Calif., staggered back down the hill for water for his comrades. He was in one of the lead assault platoons.

"It's not the 'gooks' that are harassing the hell out of us," the corporal said. "It's this terrible terrain and the sun. By the time you get to the top of the hill the guys are exhausted. Some of these guys fainted more than once going up that hill. In Tarawa you could at least see the enemy. Here the 'gooks' hide in bushes and use camouflage, and you can never see what you are shooting at."

Pfc. John Hicks, 19, of Jacksonville, Fla., the only survivor of his rifle team of four, said, "When we got close to the top of the hill they started pinning us down with grazing fire that steadily raked the ground all around us. You could not even raise your head. The company officer got it within seconds when he got up to try to rescue a wounded man.

"Men were falling around me like flies. And the 'gooks' had mortars on the other side of the ridge, which they lobbed in on us. The men were going crazy for water. We lost several sending them to bring us water. The planes tried to drop water cans, but they all broke.

"They told us to take the hill," said Corp. Roy L. Streetman of Santa Maria, Calif., "and we took it and we are still there. But it was the toughest going I ever ran into."

Malik Ouster Move Hinted

U. S. Accuses Russia of Using U. N. as Stage to Aid N. Koreans

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, Aug. 8 (NYHT)—The United States accused Russia today of using the presidency of the United Nations Security Council for maneuvers designed to help the North Korean Communist invaders, and warned Russia to abandon such tactics within two days, or face the possibility of extraordinary action by the other Council members.

Such extraordinary action, it was explained by Ernest A. Gross, deputy American delegate, might include approving a special new rule calling for election of a Security Council president, thus ousting Russian delegate Jacob A. Malik from the seat he holds for August through the tradition of alphabetical rotation.

Refusal to Meet

Or, said Gross, the Security Council might disassociate itself from the Korean problem and transfer it to a special session of the U. N. General Assembly. Another possibility was that the Council members would simply refuse to meet under the presidency of Malik.

It was the accumulation of tactics that led Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate, finally to charge that all the facts showed that the Soviet Union was lined up on the side of the Korean Communist invaders against 53 members of the U. N., who were trying to resist the invaders and bring about a just peace in Korea.

Then, Austin proposed, and a few minutes later it was approved by 9 to 1, with Russia in the negative and Yugoslavia abstaining, that the Council adjourn until Thursday. Meanwhile, he said, the Russian delegation should get instructions from Moscow that will enabe the Council to function and not remain stalled, as it is, until the end of August.

And, added Austin, "during this

U. S. Drive Gains 2 to 3 Miles Along South Coast

First Cavalry Hits At New Bridgehead Of Some 2500 Men; South Koreans Help

Tokyo (Wednesday), Aug. 9 (AP).—The Korean Communists today shoved tanks and troops across the Naktong River only 12 air miles northwest of Taegu as the entire river defense line erupted in heavy fighting.

The greatest threat yet to the key communications hub came as Americans launched a general attack against a Red bridgehead to the southwest.

Counterattacking South Koreans hammered the Reds back to the river's east bank at spots northwest of Taegu.

The gravest menace to Taegu, 55 miles northwest of the all-important supply port of Pusan, was at Waegwan. There the Communists got 10 tanks and a battalion of troops across in a dawn haze.

Five Tanks Knocked Out

Five of the Red tanks were reported knocked out but the Reds still had five tanks and perhaps 2500 men on the east bank at a point where a main highway curves 16 miles to Taegu. Some 1600 North Koreans earlier had been reported across the river at Waegwan.

These reports also said the Reds had set up strong roadblocks behind the First Cavalry Divison defending Taegu in this sector. Later, however, Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle with the First Cavalry said the roadblock report was erroneous. He said Waegwan itself still was in United Nations hands.

The First Cavalry shot out patrols into the haze-draped area as soon as the dawn crossing was reported. By the time they made contact the tanks were coming over. Associated Press correspondend Lief Erickson, reporting the action at Eighth Army headquarters, said how the tanks got across was not determined immediately.

Mop-up Pledged

Just south of the First Cavalry, American troops on the 24th Division front opened a general attack on an estimated 2500 to 3000 Reds who had crossed the Naktong west of Changnyong. Changnyong is 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

The Americans surged forward at 5:45 a. m., Associated Press Correspondent O. H. P. King reported from the front, and by noon had overrun Communist positions in a 1000-yard advance. He said the Reds had been thrown back to a ridge on the east bank — the

Low-Rank Marines To Be Called First

Pvt. Banta's Story:

'Hell Busted Loose and That Was It'

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

"At 9 a. m., all hell busted loose and that was it."

At first the slender GI in civilian slacks and a sports shirt looked his 20 years, but as he spoke, the years seemed to settle on him.

He told of the confusion, the retreats, and the terror of July 21, the day he was wounded in Korea. The day he held his arm for 24 hours to keep from bleeding to death.

That shattered left arm was Pvt. Tom Banta's ticket back to the States, to Walter Reed Hospital, and to his home at 913 Massachusetts ave. nw.

He sat there in the kitchen last night, while his mother laid out a dress pattern, and told how it happened.

Telephone Linesman

Tom was a telephone linesman, assigned to Headquarters Company, First Battalion of the Thirty-fourth Infantry Regiment.

On the night of July 20, "we were on the north side of Taejon when the battalion commander gave orders for all vehicles to be evacuated—they were starting to close in on us."

Banta was assigned a machine gun on a radio transmitter truck.

"We stopped in Taejon about dawn. It was crazy how it happened. Our convoy was on each side of the road while we took a break.

"We knew we had tanks and when two came down the road right through us nobody paid any attention. Then all hell busted loose and that was it." They were Korean tanks.

Like Sardine Cans

"The regimental commander saw two more coming and he knew what they were. He had the bazooka team knock them out. They split open like sardine cans.

"Then the other two tanks opened up with their .88 turret guns and the Koreans dropped artillery and mortars on us. They almost had us surrounded. General (William B.) Dean ordered us to move out.

"The city (Taejon) was a mass of flames and ruins. There were snipers on the roofs and in the trees. They pinned us down a half hour before we moved out of town.

"I was riding on the side of the truck, hanging on with my left arm, when they hit me. I didn't have any feeling in the arm when I fell from the truck." It was about 7:30 p. m.

"A medic put a field dressing on the wound (two Jap-made .25 caliber slugs, one of which broke the left arm) and they moved me out some time after dark. There were six of us in a jeep."

Then his mother, Mrs. Janis Banta, put in: "He didn't tell you how he held on to his arm 24 hours to keep from bleeding to death." And Banta added: "There just wasn't any way of getting a tourniquet."

They moved Pvt. Tom Banta to a field hospital in Taegu, removed one bullet. He still wears it on a chain around his neck. Then they sent him to Japan. He left Tokyo for the States July 27, arrived at Bolling Field August 2.

Two days later, from Walter Reed Hospital, he called Mrs. Banta at the Hamilton Hotel, where she works as a seamstress.

"He said, 'Hi there, mama,' and I said, 'What!' I thought he was still in Japan," Mrs. Banta recalls.

She said she and her family—Tom and his sister, Nancy, 13—have lived in Washington eight years. Tom went to Langley Junior High, then to Bell Vocational School, where he studied house painting.

Private Banta wants to be a telephone company lineman when he gets out of the Army.

But first: "I'm going back to the Thirty-fourth. I've still got some buddies there and it got boresome, being pushed back and back." The doctors think his arm will be healed in eight months.

Last night a photographer posed the mother and son. He asked Mrs. Banta to "look happy."

Said she: "The first time I've seen him in 31 months, and you ask me to look happy!"

Officers and men of junior rank and with training for combat jobs will be called first to active duty from its 80,000 volunteer reserves, the Marine Corps said yesterday.

Requirements among the first 50,000, to be ordered to report between August 15 and October 31, will be chiefly for officers in the grades of captain and below and for men of the grade of sergeant and below. Some personnel, the Marine Corps said, will be called in grades above those when their military specialties fall in categories especially needed.

Only a few women Marines will be called up among the first 50,000, the announcement said, and then only to "meet expansion requirements" and to release men for combat.

10-Day Notice at Least

All personnel called, it was explained, will be given at least 10 days to settle personal affairs. For longer periods, the "exigencies of the service" will be the determining factor.

Other services also were counting their reserves yesterday and ironing out difficulties posed by the peculiar nature of the present demand for manpower.

The Army, which embarked upon a system of priorities whereby men with no dependents would be called first, already has had to shift its aim. While there has been no announced change in official policy, Army commanders have found it necessary in filling out reserve and National Guard units to call in reservists regardless of dependents. This step also has been made necessary by the need for certain types of specialists regardless of dependency.

Reserve Commissions Frozen

The Navy took steps to hold on to its officers by halting voluntary retirement and resignation of officers with less than 30 years service. It was expected at least 1700 officers would be retained in the next 12 months by this policy.

Navy reserve officers, including Waves and nurses, also were affected by an order freezing reserve commissions. This order, confirmed yesterday, said all requests for relief from active duty would be held in abeyance unless services of an individual were determined not to be needed in the present situation.

Efforts of the Coast Guard to build up its recently reconstituted reserve were changed yesterday from an appeal for inactive reservists to an appeal for officers and men to join an active reserve.

Shot 3 Times As He Lay On Ground, Medic Says

A 27-year-old infantry medic hospitalized at Walter Reed yesterday told how a North Korean shot him three times as he lay wounded.

Sergt. Roy M. Johnson, of Augusta, Ga., said he was shot as he lay on the ground by a Red soldier who leaped from his tank after machine-gunning Johnson's Jeep, blasting off his left hand.

He said the enemy stood over him and shot three times, hitting him on the other hand and the chest. Johnson lay as though lifeless for an hour after, he said.

"He thought I was dead, and as far as I was concerned I was," the patient said.

Johnson, a veteran of seven years, said he was driving his stretcher Jeep toward the front near Taejon, unarmed, when he came upon the tank. He thought it was American till it opened fire.

Ex-Gob, Enlisting in Air Force, Is Surprised To Find Two Brothers Joining Service, Too

The Washington Post

SWORN TOGETHER—Capt. William W. Cumbey of the Arlington Farms recruiting Station administers the oath of the armed forces to the Bower brothers of 6144 Shady Side ave., Capitol Heights, Md. The brothers are (from left) Prince, 25, to enter the Air Force, and Ernest, 18, and Mack, 20, who would like to serve in an armored outfit

Threee brothers joined up yesterday to pace enlistments here. And one of them didn't know the other two were doing it until he looked back and saw them following.

Prince E. Bower, 24, thought his brothers Mac, 20, and Ernest, 18, were just driving him down to the recruiting office at Arlington Farms so he could enlist in the Air Force. When they trotted down the walk after him and joined the Army, he was as surprised as the South Koreans were back in June.

"They must have talked it over after I told them I was joining up," Prince said.

The three brothers are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Bower, of 6144 Shadyside ave., Capitol Heights, Md. Prince, who did 27 months with the Navy Air Corps, went into the Air Force as a PFC. His brothers entered the Army as recruits.

Other news yesterday on the recruiting, reserve and draft fronts:

The Marine Corps reported its phones busy all day with calls from members of the volunteer reserves wanting to know when they might be called up. The queries came on the heels of the Corps' announced mobilization of its 80,000 volunteer reservists.

At the draft examination center at Arlington Farms, 56 men reported out of 73 ordered in this area, with this breakdown: From Board 53, Silver Spring, 25 men ordered, 20 reported; Board 54, Chevy Chase, Md., 15 ordered, 13 reported; Board 56, Upper Marlboro, Md., 21 ordered, 14 reported; Board 91, Luray, Va., 12 ordered, 9 reported.

The Army and Air Force processed 56 men, with 28 enlisting in the Army and 5 in the Air Force. Fourteen were found qualified for enlistment today. Nine were rejected.

The Navy swore in 16 men. Eleven others applied for enlistment and 8 of these passed the test.

The Marines had 37 inquiries, 15 of these wanting to enlist. None was accepted, the Marine recruiting office said.

On Korea Front

4 Maryland, 3 Virginia GIs Wounded

Four Maryland and three Virginia soldiers have been wounded in action in the Korean area, the Department of Defense announced yesterday in its latest casualty list.

The Maryland GI's are Corpl. Jack W. Dofflemeyer, nephew of William H. Stum, 417 Indiana ave., Hagerstown; Pvt. George S. Gray, jr., 20, son of George Sterling Gray, sr., Accokeek; Corpl. Herman T. Hill, son of Mrs. Oola Hill, Route 3, Delmar; and Pvt. Walter A. Kelley son of Mrs. Alice E. Kelley, P. O. Box 63, Vindex.

Gray, the son of an employe of the naval research laboratory here, has been in the Army for one year and left for Japan two months ago.

Appellate Court Gets Liberty Plea Of Harry Bridges

San Francisco, Aug. 8 (AP).—Harry Bridges' plea for freedom from jail on bail was taken under submission by the United States Court of Appeals late today.

The action apparently meant that the CIO longshore labor leader would remain imprisoned at least until the end of the week.

Bridges had been at liberty on $25,000 bail pending appeal on a perjury conviction for saying he was not a Communist when he became an American citizen in 1945.

Johnson's Nephew Enlists

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 8 (AP).—Paul S. Johnson, jr., 21-year-old nephew of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, enlisted as a private today and started a four-year hitch in the Air Force.

Failure of Draft Selectees To Report for Tests Declining

Delinquency in reporting for the draft has dropped from around 15 percent to less than 5 percent, the District Selective Service director reported yesterday.

Hailing this "very distinct improvement," William E. Leahy said he felt even the 5 percent was due almost entirely to such mechanical causes as failure of men to keep local boards informed of changes of address—not to draft-dodging.

The situation in draft-reporting in Maryland appeared less bright, according to the Associated Press.

State Selective Service Director Henry C. Stanwood said that about 20 percent are failing to respond.

This, however, he noted was a "gradual improvement" over the condition last month when as many as 30 percent of eligibles notified were failing to appear for their physical and mental examinations.

Both Leahy and Stanwood reported the draft machinery of their areas ready to handle all the work it must do in the "foreseeable future."

Both reported an average of almost one full-time clerk per board to the District's 15 and Maryland's 66 draft boards.

The Maryland draft quota through October is 1474, the District's 500.

Refugee's Report

Russia Said To Promise Korea Land

Somewhere in Korea, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Korean refugee from Seoul today said Russia has promised to give Red Korea two Manchurian provinces after the war.

Capt. Kenneth R. Cornell, American liaison officer with the South Korean forces, said this information came from a Korean schoolteacher who escaped from Seoul July 27.

Cornell said he considered the source and the information reliable.

The refugee estimated 3000 persons had been killed in air bombings of Seoul up to July 27.

Two 18-year-old North Korean girl refugees said they had been forced into the Red army and given fifth - column spy assignments. They said they were ordered to pose as refugees in Yechon and gather information on South Korean troops, arms and equipment.

The girls said the Korean Reds were impressing all childless women between 18 and 30. Some were trained for combat and others were assigned to espionage.

They said at least one third of the North Korean troops were green young men and women.

Families of Wounded To Be Flown to U. S.

Tokyo, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Wives and families of Americans wounded in Korea and sent home will be allowed to fly to the United States to join them, it was announced today.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced that Military Air Transport Service planes will evacuate them from Japan within 12 to 15 hours after they request reservations.

Shifting U. S. Policy Blamed by Liddell Hart

Cambridge, England, Aug. 8 (AP).—The United States has only a 50-50 chance of victory in Korea, a distinguished British military commentator said today.

He is Capt. B. H. Liddell Hart, military editor of the Encyclopedia Britanica and author of many books on war strategy.

Hart, speaking at the Liberal Party's summer school, said the danger of defeat arose because the United States had followed two conflicting policies.

First, he said, President Truman decided to evacuate Korea in June, 1949, declaring it to be indefensible.

Then, he added, because "the Americans could not bear to watch it happen, Mr. Truman took the steps which staked United States prestige on what was previously judged 'a forlorn hope.'

"The danger of world war has become acute through two contrary American decisions—to withdraw and return."

Israel Agrees to Send Medical Missions

Jerusalem, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Israeli Parliament tonight approved a cabinet decision to send medical missions but no ground forces to aid United Nations forces in Korea. Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett said Israel was acting in accordance with her obligations under the U. N. Charter.

Tokyo, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Allied planes increased the tempo of their bomb and rocket attacks behind the North Korean lines today.

American B-26 light bombers carried out night bombing of supply centers and the raids were followed today by swarms of U. S. Air Force, Navy and Australian fighters and bombers.

The fliers, ranging as far north as Seoul, hit troop concentrations, tanks and war material being rushed to the North Koreans.

The constant harassment by Fifth Air Force fighters and bombers was closely coordinated with coastal bombardments by United Nations naval forces and strikes by big bombers and carrier-based Marine and Navy planes.

B-26 Hits Nine Cities

The Far East Air Force announced that B-26s struck nine cities during the night, including Chinju, Seoul, Kimpo airdrome, Taejon and Kumchon. They also hit enemy troops and vehicles.

American and Australian fighters took off in early dawn to seek out new enemy targets. A group of Australians operating from Japanese bases spent the night at an American field for an early start today.

Air Force communiques emphasized the fact the air war was increasing in intensity. A spokesman disclosed that the B-29s that struck Pyongyang Monday had left the states only four days and 23 hours earlier.

The Air Force said F-80 jets, in a cleanup role to bombardment of the Seoul railway yards on Monday by B-29s, made a high-speed rocket run on the pontoon bridge across the Han River today.

Capt. Owen E. Radcliff, Tampa, Fla., flying wingman on the raid, said hits were made on the bridge at several places.

Troops Strafed

First Lieut. Alvin L. Wimer, Medford, Oreg., flying his sixty-second combat mission against the North Koreans, strafed the Poksong-Dong marshaling yards.

"I hit a schoolhouse with three rockets and left it burnning," he said.

As troops came out of the schoolhouse, Wimer and other F-80 pilots strafed them with "good results." They also set fire to trucks and railway cars and finished up on artillery pieces.

In other developments:

Australian fliers knocked out vehicles seat of Chiju with 500 pound bombs, blew up three tanks with rockets and destroyed trucks used to haul North Korean infantrymen. Five other tanks were hit.

Working in close support of American Marines and Army infantry, the Australians dropped fragementation and 500-pound bombs on enemy positions. Anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

Carrier-based Panther jets, Corsairs and Skyraiders also attacked in the Chinju aea and in small towns behind the front lines.

Truce Brings End To Bitter Fighting In Indonesia

Jakarta, Java, USI, Aug. 8 (AP).—A revolt in Makassar, chief East Indonesian city of Celebes Island, ended in a truce today, the Indonesian Defense Ministry announced.

A conference between Dutch and Indonesian military chiefs and United Nations observers was reported to have ended bitter fighting between rebel Indonesian soldiers—mostly amboinese veterans of Dutch Army service—and USI government troops.

The government said the agreement threatens rebels who disobey cease-fire orders of the Dutch commander with loss of their status as members of the Dutch Army. Most rebel Indonesians belonged to the Netherlands Army and were awaiting demobilization with the withdrawal of the Dutch from their former colony when the fighting broke out.

Germans Against New Army, Bluecher Says

Bonn, Aug. 8 (AP) — West Germany's Vice Chancellor Franz Blucher said yesterday that the German people are not willing to be rearmed.

Any allied move to rebuild the German army, he said in a statement, would be against the will of the people.

Moreover, he declared, "talk of rebuilding the German army would give the Russians a good reason for making a preventive move.

The Vice Chancellor said, however, that he did favor creation of a strong federal police force.

Communists Infiltrate Americans' Lines, Cut Main Road Supplying Yanks' Striking Force

By Don Whitehead

With United States Troops on the Southern Front in Korea (Wednesday) Aug. 9 (AP).—The commander of the bogged American task force striking at Chinju went to the front yesterday and issued orders to attack.

Maj. Gen. William B. Kean ordered regimental and battalion commanders to make the Americans' first night assault.

(This dispatch did not say whether the night attack had yet been made.)

Kean made his battleline visit after a conference with Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Eighth Army commander, at Kean's southern command post.

The main supply route to the United States front was blocked by the enemy for more than four hours yesterday—the most confused day of the Korean war for the American Army.

The southern spearhead of the three-pronged American drive to the west halted before Red artillery fire at a point west of Chindong, where the Fifth Regimental Combat Team had turned northwestward toward Chinju. Chindong is 25 miles southeast of Chinju, major Communist base for the Reds on the southern front.

United States Marines were called to help the Fifth get rolling again.

The Thirty-fifth Regiment carried the northern spearhead to within 12 miles of Chinju, but was ordered to hold up its advance until the southern drive was underway again.

The Thirty-fifth captured much enemy equipment and guns in its push and continued to mop up Communists in its sector.

Two enemy roadblocks that had been thrown up earlier in the day had been cleared up. One was eight miles northwest of Mason, which is 28 air miles east of Chinju. The other was near Chindong.

The Marines were diverted from the main attack and sent to 3000-foot-high peaks under a burning sun to drive out the Red raiders and protect the flank of the Fifth Regimental Combat Team.

The Fifth had been reported officially to have advanced well beyond Chindong in the first wave of the attack. But Kean's personal check of the American positions showed the southern flank had barely moved beyond the original jumpoff point 10 miles west of Masan.

Before Kean visited the front, the Reds had slipped down from the hills and cut the main American supply route with machine-gun and mortar fire.

For 4 hours the Reds blocked the road five miles southwest of Masan on the road to Chindong. They had slipped in behind an American security battalion that had held hill positions overlooking the supply route but had been called away on another mission.

"Going Until They Drop"

Corpl Wallace Leach, of Wichita, Kans., said the Reds suddenly opened fire on American troops assembling on the valley road and getting into their vehicles.

United States tanks then plastered the hillside with 75-millimeter shells. Planes came to rocket and bomb the Reds. Then the infantry began moving across the valley and into the hills and the Marines were sent climbing the peaks to flush out the enemy.

"Get them," a Marine colonel said. "The enemy is not going to live if he stays there. This is a battle against the heat as much as against the enemy. Our boys are going until they drop. That's all you can ask of anybody."

Heat Takes Toll

Thirty of the first 40 Marine casualties were victims of heat prostration.

A fourth American regiment—the Twenty-fourth Infantry of the Twenty-fifth Division — was drawn into the fighting.

Negro troops of this regiment were ordered to clear out Haman, about eight miles northwest of Masan.

A small Communist force equipped with mortars and automatic weapons came down from the hills just as units of the Twenty-fourth got in trucks and jeeps to head for Masan.

The Reds opened fire at close range. The Americans suffered 11 casualties, including two military police who were directing traffic. None of the casualties was believed to be injured fatally.

The Americans got their vehicles out of range. Two and a half hours later, tanks, planes and troops were still trying to wipe out the enemy force.

In the fighting on the main supply road the enemy was driven back and there was only occasional fire across the supply road. Traffic began to flow to the front again by noon, and we were able to push down the valley to front-line positions.

I rode in Kean's convoy as he went to check personally on his troops positions. The two-star General keep pushing up until he reached the most advanced observation post of the leading company.

Far in the rear, our artillery boomed and shells came whistling over. We watched them send up their plumes of smoke in enemy positions. Later, we could hear the crump of the explosions.

Capt. Frederick Griffith, Cleveland, sat by his foxhole.

"It's all screwed up," he growled. Griffith was a company commander in the Eighty-eighth Division in Italy in the last war.

Order To Close Gap

"It would help," he said, "if they could give us maps or tell us who is on our right and left. I could use more information, but they don't tell me anything."

Griffith said the lead battalion had been cut off from the main body of troops Monday. Then he grinned. "But we usually are cut off every day."

Kean scrambled down the hillside and his little convoy raced back through heavy dust to a command post. He gathered the officers about him and ordered them to attack until they had closed the gap between them and the 35th regiment.

War Memorial Bridge Dedication Is Postponed

Dedication of the Corpl. John C. Brown Memorial Bridge at Rockcrest, Rockville, Md., has been postponed until August 26.

The bridge, originally scheduled to be dedicated Saturday, is named for the first American from Maryland killed in Korea and probably is the first memorial to a victim of the Korean War.

He was from Baltimore. The Montgomery County Roads Department is unable to get the approaches ready in time for the celebration. The bridge crosses the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks between Rockcrest and the Rockville Pike.

Escort to Welcome General Van Fleet

Fort Meade, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—Second Army headquarters plans a 15-gun salute and full military honors for Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet when he arrives Wednesday to take its command.

He will be met near an entrance by an honor escort made up of the Second Army band, two tanks of the Third Calalry Regiment, and Battery B of the Seventy-fifth Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion. He succeeds Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, who retired on July 31.

U. S. Warships Pour Big Shells On Rail Communication City

By Larry Tighe

With U. S. Navy Task Force Off Korea, Aug. 7 (Delayed) (U.P.).—United States Navy warships steamed to within 120 miles of the Russian border tonight and bombarded the Korean east coast port of Tanchon, a major communications center.

(The attack coincided with two other bombardments of enemy coastal positions. United States Navy bombardment forces also hit Chongsan-ni, some 100 miles north of Pusan on the east coast.

(British, South Korean and Netherlands ships blasted Inchon, the port for Seoul, leaving huge fires burning in the waterfront area).

The American ships shelling Tanchon, cruisers with destroyer escort, steamed within a few hundred yards of the shores in an audicious attack that took them farther north than any United Nations units have gone.

The primary target was a railroad yard near Tanchon. Dozens of rounds of 1000-pound shells left a pall of smoke and clouds of dirt over the city long after the fleet had turned away.

Tanchon's importance is largely as a communications center. Rail lines feed out of there to Vladivostok on the north and to the interior of Korea.

The destroyers moved in close to shore, hammering away at the dock areas and small industrial plants near by. The task force commander had warned the crews he did not want civilian areas hit, and the city itself appeared unhurt as we steamed away.

After the shelling the captain of this cruiser told his crew over the public address system they could give a railroad bridge "about 20 rounds if you wish."

The men cheered and promptly poured 20 shells at the half-mile-long structure, which had been carrying war shipments to Communist troops.

Turkish Troops Ready To Leave for Korea

Istanbul, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Turkish ground forces assigned to duty in Korea were reported today to be ready to start leaving for the Far East by air August 26. Officials declined to confirm the date.

"Our troops are ready to leave, but awaiting a United Nations headquarters order for departure," one official said.

10 Red Tanks Cross River Near Taegu

last high ground between the Americans and the river.

Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commander of the 24th, said the Reds would be "all cleaned out by nightfall."

North Koreans in the Changnyong bridgehead area were subjected to heavy American artillery and air bombardment.

Eighth Army headquarters issued two communiques within 40 minutes Wednesday but the official picture of the Naktong fighting was far different from that reported by AP front correspondents.

The first communique, issued at 11:20 a. m., (9:20 p. m. EDT, Tuesday) said "crossings and attacks just northeast of Waegwan have been successfully contained and the ground lost yesterday retaken."

The second communique, issued at noon, said "a reinforced company of North Korean forces crossed the Naktong into the First Cavalry sector at 0540 (5:40 a. m.) yesterday (SIC), South of Waegwan."

Neither made any mention of the 10 tanks or the Red battalion which field dispatches said crossed in the Waegwan area early Wednesday. Nor was there any mention of the 1600 Reds across as reported in earlier field dispatches.

The second communique added, however, that "reports from the First Cavalry Division are that the enemy will be contained and pushed back across the river today (Wednesday)."

As a further indication that the second communique covered Wednesday action it added: "In the ROK (Republic of Korea) sector just north of Waegwan the enemy has retaken ground which it took and lost yesterday."

This referred to earlier reports which had said the South Koreans counterattacking 5 miles north of Waekwan had lriven the Reds from high ground on the east bank.

Neither communique, however, appeared to contradict reports of a successful South Korean counterattack 25 miles north of Waekwan. There the Republicans had pushed forward nearly 2 miles. They were reported on the Naktong's bank at some places and mopping up remaining Red pockets.

The first communique's announcement that the southern offensive had gained two to three miles toward Chinju apparently included part of a four-mile advance credited to a battalion of the Army's Fifth Regimental Combat Team.

The communique did not specify whether the gains were made all along the front of the advancing force or only by the one regiment reported in field dispatches.

The advance placed this unit 4 miles beyond a road junction about 3 miles southwest of Chindong.

Roadblock Overcome

An enemy roadblock that stalled the flow of supplies to support the American thrust against Chinju virtually was broken, with traffic moving through light machine-gun fire.

The number of North Korean troops inside American and South Korean defense lines was not officially estimated. Nor was there any guess on the number of Red guerillas active in the area.

Eighth Army headquarters Tuesday placed five North Korean regiments and two battalions inside the lines. The Communist regiment ranges from 2000 to 3000 men and its battalions run 800 to 1000.

While ground forces were bitterly engaged along the whole 140-mile front Air Force, Marine and carrier-based Navy planes teamed Tuesday for a record of 550 sorties by land-based planes and 203 sorties by carrier planes.

Most of the attacks were in close support of ground troops. Other fighter-bombers stabbed at communication lines far behind the front.

Correspondent Don Whitehead with United States troops on the southern front said the main supply route feeding the first American offensive of the war, was blocked more than four hours on Tuesday. He described it as "the most confused day of the Korean war for the American army."

Marines on the extreme sothern end of the American drive were halted by Red artillery fire, Whitehead said. Red infiltrators added to the slowup by clamping a road block only five miles west of Masan, supply port that is 27 air miles west of Pusan.

The situation grew sufficiently serious for Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army, to fly from his headquarters to a southern command post. There he conferred with Maj. Gen. William B. Kean, commanding the American drive.

After the talks Kean ordered his regimental and battalion commanders to resume their attack with the first American night assault—the time when North Koreans usually attempt infiltration.

General MacArthur in a late Tuesday-night war summary said the American drive "has resumed in the direction of Chinju."

The Marines, instead of participating in the main attack, were probing through 3000-foot-high peaks, driving out Red flanking threats to the Fifth Regimental Combat team. The latter is advancing in the center of the 20-mile wide line.

MacArthur said enemy casualties continued to be high. About 300 were killed or captured in small pockets. The American casualtoies in the first 24 hours of the three-day offensive were officially reported as 10 killed, 50 wounded and 7 missing in action.

Reinforcements Arrive

Additional reinforcements were thrown into the southern push. Elements of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Regiment—a Negro outfit, of the Twenty-fifth Division—were shifted to Haman, eight miles northwest of Mason with orders to wipe out a Red infiltration threat.

The shifting of more Twenty-fifth Division units from the western front along the winding Naktong River came at a time when the Reds were building up a bridgehead six miles southwest of Changnyong to a regiment in strength. Chamgnyong is 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

The buildup in this sector was rapid after an original crossing of 800 men last Saturday was earlier reported seven-eighths destroyed.

Eighth Army headquarters said a second North Korean force of possibly 800 men crossed immediately north of the first one.

MacArthur's summary said the possible threat of these bridgeheads "has neither increased nor decreased."

Red tanks were observed several miles west of the Naktong, waiting for a chance to cross the river.

The nearest threat, however, came from northwest of Taegu. Just north of Waegwan, which is 13 miles northwest of Taegu, the Reds succeeded in slipping two battalions totaling 1600 men and one tank across the river.

They drove about two miles deep along a 2000-yard front. Seven other tanks were waiting to be ferried when American air strikes were called to attack them.

There was no immediate indication how many Russian-built tanks remained in this sector. The Reds have been clever in concealing their armor by day and moving it by night.

A still more powerful Communist thrust bore down on Taegu from the north. About 20 miles north of Waegwan three North Korean regiments hurled a double attack on the left flank of South Korean troops.

The Republicans were last reported holding their ground.

General Walker, Eighth Army commander, spoke of this attack as the "newest threat" to United Nations forces.

Farther east along the northern rim of the defense line two North Korean regiments, possibly 5000 strong, moved unopposed in a gap 12 miles wide between South Korean lines. Their speed southward was being held back only by difficult trails over the rugged east coast mountain range.

It may have been an advance element of this force which was reported by South Korean army observers to have probed within 5 miles of Pohang, the beachhead where First Cavalry troops landed unopposed almost a month ago.

CROSSING MADE—While United States Marines and infantry were resuming their drive yesterday against North Korean Reds west of Pusan (A), the enemy launched a triple-pronged offensive (B and C) across the Naktong River. Ten Red tanks pushed across at Waegwan. This drive is being met by a general attack against a bridgehead across the Naktong 28 miles southwest of Taegu. At another point on the northern front, two North Korean regiments (D) moved unopposed in a gap 12 miles between the South Korean lines

'Seoul City Sue'

Radio Siren Tells Yanks To Go Home

U. S. Army Headquarters in Korea, Aug. 8 (AP) — A Red Korean "Tokyo Rose" began propaganda broadcasts in good American English last night from Seoul, Communist-held capital of South Korea.

Like the Tokyo Rose broadcasts of the Second World War, the aim is to undermine soldier morale.

Seoul's woman propagandist chided United States airmen for what she called "promiscuous bombing of schools and strafing of farmers." In honeyed tones she urged American soldiers to "return to your corner ice cream stores in the States."

A 558th Military Police Company radio picked up the broadcast. Enlisted men immediately nicknamed her "Seoul City Sue."

The identity of the woman was not known here. She spoke with a slight accent that MP listeners could not identify.

Tokyo Rose — Iva Toguri D'Aquino—was one of six English-speaking Japanese women who broadcast over Radio Tokyo between 1943 and 1945. She was born in Los Angeles July 4, 1916. Last fall in San Francisco she was convicted of treason and sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas signed an order February 7 permitting Tokyo Rose's release on $50,000 bail pending appeal action.

House Group Backs Standby Control Plan

House in junking the proposal of Representative McKinnon (D., Calif.) for automatic imposition of controls once the Labor Department's consumers price index advanced 5 percent. McKinnon, a committee member, said his plan is now "out." But technically it still is before the House.

The Senate now is expected to take up the control measure on Thursday.

Here is an analysis of the Senate Banking Committee's bill plus the House and House Banking Committee's action on it:

Title I: Gives the President priorities and allocation powers; bars hoarding by business or housewives of goods in excess of normal once the President has declared such goods as scarce. The House bill is similar and includes an antihoarding provision.

Title II: Gives the President powers to requisition equipment, supplies or facilities necessary for national defense; provides a method of compensation. The House bill has a similar title.

Guarantees Proposed

Title III: Gives the President power to expedite production and deliveries under Government contracts by expanding productive capacity through Government guarantees up to two billion dollars. The House biss has a similar title.

These first three titles were part of the President's original request for powers to meet the Korean war emergency.

Title IV: This is the price-wage stabilization title added by Congress to Mr. Truman's original request.

The Senate bill permits the President to try out a voluntary program, to establish selective controls at wholesale only, or to establish a general price-wage freeze, all at his discretion.

The House committee voted that the selective controls must be at both the wholesale and retail levels for the commodities covered, if that authority is used. Both bills declared that wages must be frozen (though inequities may be rectified) when retail prices on "materials, services and property comprising a substantial part of all sales at retail" have been frozen.

There is no rollback date in either bill, but the lowest figure for prices or wages would be those of May 24-June 24, 1950. For agriculture, with some exceptions, the Senate version sets June 15 as the base date. The House version, also with exceptions, uses the May 24-June 24 period.

Rent Controls Not in Bills

Rent control is not covered in either bill, the congressional intent being to handle that in a separate measure, since the present law runs through 1950.

The House committee will meet this morning to consider the Senate version of the remainder of the bill, as follows:

Title V: Provides that labor disputes be settled by collective bargaining, but permits the President to set up a special labor board; requires any action taken to be consistent with the Taft-Hartley Labor Law.

Title VI: Provides for restoration of wartime consumer credit controls, known as "Regulation W"; gives the Federal Reserve Board sweeping powers to control all privately financed new real estate construction through credit controls. This title was one of those originally asked by President Truman.

Title VII: Enacts general provisions; provides that "persons of outstanding experience" can be hired without pay but, instead of the $1-a-year practice of the last war, gives them up to $15 a day for expenses; sets up a Joint Congressional Committee on Defense Production for the two banking committees; terminates the entire bill on June 30, 1952, at the latest.

The committee is not provided for in the House draft of this section, however.

Omits Truman Proposal

The Senate Banking Committee's bill completely omits the President's proposal to clamp down on commodity market speculation. The House has yet to vote on this section.

One possible fly in the Senate ointment was the inclination as of yesterday, of Senators Fulbright (D., Ark.) and Douglas (D., Ill.), both Banking Committee members, to propose on the Senate floor an automatic "trigger" to start a price-wage freeze.

This proposal, originated by Fulbright, at first adopted by the Senate committee and then rejected, was the basis of the McKinnon proposal in the House. It is the provision to which the Administration's economists object most highly.

U. S. Hits Russia on U. N. Acts

interval I suggest that we other delegations consult together to determine what steps we will take to assert the authority of the Security Council in the event that the Soviet government continues its campaign to prevent its president (President Malik of the Council from acting."

No details of the impending action have been settled among the Council majority, but all have been discussed among all delegations except Russia, and agreements are expected to be worked out before the next Council meeting at 3 p. m. on Thursday.

The American move in the Security Council was made today by Austin toward the end of a nearly four-hour session in which Malik dominated the proceedings with tactics of delay and frustration, which prevented the Council from getting on to further business on the Korean problem.

Malik, who returned a week ago from a seven-month absence by walkout, and took over the Council presidency, employed the following devices today in his role as presiding officer:

1. Introduced a new resolution demanding that the United States terminate immediately its "barbarous inhuman bombing" of populated areas in Korea.

2. Refused once more to honor a previous Council decision to invite Dr. John M. Chang, South Korean Ambassador to Washington, to the Council table as observer.

3. Rejected repeated Chinese demands, supported by Norway, Great Britain and the United States, for an official question of an invitation to Dr. Chang.

4. Engaged in several propaganda speeches against the United States, repeating the charge that the Americans are aggressors in Korea, and that the American ruling circles are determined on war, whereas the Soviet Union stands forth as a champion of peace.

Leading up to his proposal, Austin charged that the Russians were not only aiding the Korean Communists in the Council, but that they could, if they wished, use their influence to call off the Korean invaders. He said he hoped that the Russians would see the light before Thursday.

Malik, however, snapped right back and said that the Soviet Union knew what it was doing and did not need any two-day delays.

Thus, it appeared certain that on Thursday he would continue with the same tactics and the Council majority would be forced into whatever extraordinary action it decides upon.

Malik opened today's meeting by reading a cable from the North Korean Communists accusing the United States of wanton bombing in Korea, of destroying many nonmilitary targets and killing many thousands of noncombatant North Korean men, women and children.

Evangeline Booth Leaves Estate to Salvation Army

White Plains, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—Evangeline Cory Booth, retired Salvation Army General, left her residuary estate and Hartsdale, N. Y., home to the Salvation Army, her will disclosed today.

The will was filed for probate in Westchester County Surrogates Court. No estimate of the value of her estate was available because there was no probate petition.

Ex-Ohio Red Tells How He Quit Party

DAVID H. LEVISON
. . . quit Reds in disgust

By The Associated Press

A Cincinnati businessman yesterday admitted to seven years' membership in the Communist Party and named 36 men and women as fellow Reds.

David H. Levison, 40, gave that testimony to the House Un-American Activities Committee, which had threatened him with a contempt citation for his refusal to answer questions at a hearing July 14.

After hearing him, the committee voted to drop its recommendation that he be cited for contempt of Congress.

Levison said he joined the party in 1935 and quit it in 1942. He said there were several reasons why he got out: He was "disgusted with the antics of some who talked constantly of fighting Hitlerism while trying to keep from being drafted;" he decided that the party did not represent the working classes; and he determined that the best way to combat Hitlerism was in a direct manner.

He said his wife was after him constantly to sever his connections with the Communists.

Levison appeared yesterday at his own request. The committee counsel asked him for what purpose he appeared.

"To make a full and complete statement of the facts to the committee," the recanted Red replied.

Levison said he was recruited as a Communist by Robert Gunkel, a fellow member of the Pen and Hammer Club in Cincinnati. Other members of the club later became Communists, he testified.

The witness said he became a member of the Hamilton County (Cincinnati) committee of the Communist Party, and, before his final break was acting secretary of the party in Hamilton County.

He testified that he was drafted into the Army in August, 1942, and was discharged as a first lieutenant in February, 1946. He said he spent 20 months in the ground forces replacement center in the European theater.

After he got out of the Army, he said, Gunkel tried to get him to rejoin the party. He said he told Gunkel "nothing doing." Other Communists later renewed the attempt, he said. "It seemed to me," he added, "that the party was making a special effort to get back former members who had been in Army service."

Truman Asks Congress for Stronger Laws Against Communist Spies and Saboteurs

leader, promptly objected to both bills, saying:

"The President is not going to be stamped into approving legislation that might destroy the Bill of Rights. The Congress is not going to approve any alien and sedition acts with my consent."

"War on the Inside"

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the Judiciary Committee, which reported out the Mundt-Ferguson-Nixon bill, said:

"I heard nothing in the President's message that was new. Everything in it was considered by the Judiciary Committee and the bill now before the Senate was presented with those thoughts in mind. We are at war on the outside. Now I think we should take immediate steps to protect the country from war on the inside."

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.), author of the bill bearing his name, said:

"The President supports the major principles of our bill. I welcome that support, even though he is a Johnny-come-lately to this kind of legislation."

President Truman reminded Congress it now has before it a bill to permit the Attorney General in certain cases to detin such aliens for indefinite periods of time—"not pursuant to a conviction for crime, but on the basis of an administrative determination."

"Repugnant to Our Traditions"

"such action," Mr. Truman said, would be repugnant to our traditions, and it should not be authorized. Present law, however, is inadequate to permit proper supervision of deportable aliens, and should be strengthened as I have indicated."

The message was an extraordinary one in that the greater part of it was devoted to the dangers of going too far in combating communism.

He said at one point:

"It would be tragic in the highest degree if we were to frighten ourselves into destroying those very liberties which are the basis of our moral leadership in the truggle for peace."

He warned Congress the Nation could not get rid of communism simply by passing a law.

He recalled, as he had done many times before, what happened in the early days of the republic when the Alien and Sedition Laws were passed. Ostensibly, he said, they were designed to prevent activities that would undermine the Nation's safety and independence.

But actually, he said, they were used to imprison many leading citizens, including a member of Congress who disagreed with the Administration then in power.

Points to Lesson of History

Mr. Truman recalled, pointedly it seemed, that the Alien and Sedition Laws "played an important part in the disappearance of the Federalist Party, which sponsored them."

Turning to the situation today, he said there are some people who wish to enact laws that would seriously damage the right of free speech and could be used, not only against subversive groups, but against groups engaged in political activities that might not be popular.

"Laws forbiding dissent do not prevent subversive activities; they merely drive them into more secret and more dangerous channels.

'Voice of Opposition'

"Police states are not secure; their history is marked by successive purges, and growing concentration camps, as their governments strike out blindly in fear of violent revolt.

"Once a government is committed to the principle of silencing the voice of opposition, it has only one way to go, and 'hat is down the path of increasingly repressive measures, until it becomes a source of terror to all its citizens and creates a country where everyone lives in fear."

Mr. Truman is known to be opposed to the Mundt-Ferguson-Nixon bill and some other anti-Communist bills now pending, but he mentioned none by name in warning against police state measures.

"Legislation is now pending before Congress," he said, "which is so broad and vague in its terms as to endanger the freedoms of speech, press and assembly protected by the First Amendment.

"Some of the proposed measures would, in effect, impose severe penalties for normal political activities on the part of certain groups, including Communists and Communst party-line followers. This kind of legislation is unnecessary, ineffective, and dangerous.

'Their Evil Purposes'

"It is unnecessary because groups such as the Communists cannot accomplish their evil purposes in this country through normal political activity. They will be repudiated by the people as they have always been.

"It is ineffective because it does not get at the real dangers from the Communists in this country. These dangers come, not from normal political activity, but from espionage, sabotage, and the building up of an organization dedicated to the destruction of our Government by violent means—against all of which we already have laws.

"This kind of proposed legislation is dangerous because, in attempting to prescribe for groups such as Communists, certain activities that are perfectly proper for everyone else, such legislation would spread a legal dragnet sufficiently broad to permit the prosecution of people who are entirely innocent or merely misguided.

"As far as the real conspirators against out institutions are concerned, such legislation would merely have the effect of driving them further underground and making it more difficult to reach them. Furthermore, if such legislation were held unconstitutional, it would make martyrs out of our worst enemies and create public sympathy for them."

"Blessings of Liberty"

Mr. Truman reminded Congress that the leadership and good will this Nation now enjoys arises in great measure from the fact that "men here have the blessings of liberty."

Consequently, he said, it would be tragic if Americans got so frightened that they destroyed the very liberties that are the basis of this country's moral leadership in the struggle for peace.

In the flurry of debate that followed the reading of the President's message in the Senate, Senator Lehman (D., N. Y.), disagreed with the position taken by Senator Mundt and Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), who said Mr. Truman supported the major principles of their bill.

Lehman said that the President, instead of accepting their bill, had rejected the greater part of it.

Majority Leader Lucas, talking to reporters later, said the Judiciary Committee ought to reexamine all the antisubversive bills and see how they square with the President's recommendations.

He said that a substitute bill might be worked out on this basis and hinted the matter will come up at a meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee today.

"The Administration is not opposed to rooting out subversives, and never has been," Lucas said. "But the President has no intention of repealing the Bill of Rights."

'Five Years Too Late'

When the President's message was read in the House, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), hailed it as a "great State paper."

Representative Lawrence H. Smith (R., Wis.), said the President's remarks came just five years too late.

"The Republicans have been talking this very document since the war and even before," Smith said. "Thank God he's finally seen the light."

Representative Keating (R., N. Y.), said, "Apparently the President has finally concluded that the Communist threat to this country is no longer a red herring."

Chairman Wood of the House Committee on Un-American Activities said he expected his committee to hold a closed meeting some time today and approve "some kind" of anti-Communist legislation.

'Cycling Slasher' Of Canada Stabs 2 More Women

Montreal, Aug. 8 (U.P.) — The "cycling slasher" of Montreal, a big-eared teen-ager who stabs women at night, wounded his third and fourth victims and rode into the darkness laughing, police said today.

Mrs. Gabrielle Rottondo, 27, said a bicycle swooped down on her last night out of the darkness. She saw a glimmer of steel, dodged, and felt a pain in her side. She said the rider was about 13. She screamed:

"Why did you do that?"

She said the youth laughed.

An hour later, 18-year-old Marcelle Jette was stabbed in the hand.

Suzette Tremblay, 20, was was stabbed in the side last Friday, and 19-year-old Yvonne Dubois, was knifed so severely she was hospitalized two days. One victim described the youth as having large ears.

Korean Surprise Laid to Raids

NYHT News Service

A series of border raids and "false alarm" massings of troops added to the surprise of the actual attack on South Korea, two high ranking Army officers told the Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday.

The committee was told by Brig. Gen. W. L. Roberts, chief of the United States mission in South Korea, and his chief of staff, Col. W. H. S. Wright, that border raids went on for a year before the actual outbreak of hostilities. The raids ranged in strength from a dozen men to as many as 2000 and 3000, according to General Roberts.

After the closed-door session, Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), committee chairman, said there were from 10 to 15 massings of North Korean troops before the invasion on June 25.

"It was a case of the North Koreans' crying wolf and then one day the wolf was there," Tydings said. "When they massed for the actual invasion, it looked like another build-up, but that time they just kept going."

Both officers said that, before the outbreak of hostilities, the North and South Koreans were deployed along the thirty-eighth parallel in width and depth. Apparently, he said, the North Koreans were doing just what we were doing—training at a strategic spot.

Shortly before the invasion, Colonel Wright said, the North Koreans were reported to have evacuated all civilians along a five-mile strip north of the dividing parallle. This was, he said, "a pretty good trick because they cold shoot at anybody that moved and they didn't have to worry about sabotage."

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) said after the meeting that the testimony of the two officers showed that there was a major element of surprise in the invasion. The South Koreans would be alerted at 4 o'clock every Saturday morning, but it would wind up in nothing but a North Korean training stunt.

Senator Tydings originally had announced that Edwin W. Pauley, former United States reparations representative, would be heard yesterday. He explained that Pauley, whose testimony in open session recently left members of the committee uncertain why he had been called, was unable to attend. Senator Wayne Morse (R., Ore.) had demanded that Pauley appear in closed session to answer "several questions" concerning his recent testimony.

On Chiang

British Told U. S. Policy Is Unchanged

By the United Press

The United States has assured Britain and several other nations that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's recent visit to Formosa does not foreshadow any change in this country's attitude toward Chiang Kai-shek.

Diplomatic informants yesterday said the assurances were given formally by the State Department in response to inquiries about the political implications of MacArthur's conferences with the Chinese Nationalist leader.

MacArthur's discussions and subsequent statements by Chinese Nationalist officials prompted some quarters in Europe and Asia to believe the United States is developing a more lenient attitude toward Chiang's regime, making a last-ditch stand on Formosa.

State Department officials said the British and others who have inquired had been informed that the MacArthur trip was based on military rather than any political considerations. This government's policy on Formosa, they were told, seeks only to localize the Korean war by preventing the spread of fighting to China and Formosa.

When the political doubts became apparent, President Truman dispatched his special assistant, W. Averell Harriman to Tokyo for talks with MacArthur. Harriman is expected back here today with a complete report on the Korean war and MacArthur's views on Formosa.

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott told reporters Secretary of State Dean Acheson knew in advance that MasArthur planned to travel to Formosa.

Idea of Using Japs in Korea Turned Down by MacArthur

By The Associated Press

Gen. Douglas MacArthur expressed doubt yesterday that there is any way to enlist Japanese in the United States armed forces without first making a peace treaty with their country.

Whether he would favor such a move after a formal peace settlement the general did not say.

Japan is "under international control," MacArthur pointed out in a cable to Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.), who had proposed that Japanese veterans be accepted as volunteers. In such circumstances, he said, such action by the United States alone would be "of doubtful feasibility."

Critics of the Magnuson proposal have argued it would lay this country open to charges of exploiting Japan and resorting to mercenary armies.

Magunson had asked MacArthur for his views on the plan. In a bill introduced last week, the Senator proposed pay for Japanese volunteers at half the American rates, with no citizenship or veterans' benefits.

MacArthur's message, made public by Magnuson, said that "the underlying purpose that you have in mind of bolstering the security of Japan and thereby strengthening resistance to totalitarian communism throughout the world has my heartiest understanding and sympathy," but added:

"Whether your actual proposal is feasible at this time, however, is more doubtful. This is largely due to the fact that no peace treaty has yet been consummated for Japan and consequently it is under international control.

"It would seem to me that the first and logical step in this matter would lie in the consummation of a peace treaty wherein the security of Japan could be fully provided.

"Until such action is accomplished, a unilateral approach to the problem by the United States such as you suggest would be of doubtful feasibility."

MacArthur told the Senator he has taken steps to add a reserve of 75,000 men to the Japanese police force and said he will "progressively add additional increments if the situation requires."

Magnuson expressed agreement with MacArthur's idea that action on a Japanese treaty should be speeded up.

Marines Drive Into Hot Spot

scrawny pine trees at the foot of the contested ridge, stretcher bearers, wounded and other survivors of the day's engagement had many tales of heroism.

Stretcher bearers brought in a wounded sergeant who, despite machine-gun bullets in the leg, defied enemy fire and, without taking cover, directed his men's fire on the targets.

Hospital Corpsman Billy Leed of Gadsen, Ala., tending a patient on a cliff, was knocked off by mortar fire, but went back on the job directly after he recovered consciousness. He came into the aid station to pick up some more supplies, and back up the mountain he went. He brought back with him a sergeant who, despite a broken leg, had remained in his foxhole fighting.

Just before his rescue by the medics, the sergeant managed to bayonet a North Korean Communist who attacked him with a knife.

Strategic Ridges

The ridges taken by the Marines were strategic ones dominating the valley down which the Americans were attacking. To the west in this valley, another Marine battalion went into action later today to clear out pockets of enemy troops that had filtered behind the American forward units.

The Marines—especially the heat exhaustion cases strewn around us—had lost much of their cockiness and had gained a new respect for the Army, which till now had been engaged in the back-breaking hill-hopping duel with the North Korean guerillas.

Yesterday, as I walked with a company toward hillside positions, the Marines, weighted heavily with equipment, started shedding ponchos and all sorts of other gear. By today, battlewise veterans were telling their buddies that the only way to fight this war is to be like the North Koreans—carry nothing but your water and your weapons.

When the enemy closed in on the lead platoon of Marines, the green, young soldiers had just put in four-and-a-half hours of climbing in the sun, the broiling effects of which must be experienced to be comprehended. The enemy, camouflaged with trees and bushes, jumped the troops from short distances, with some coming close enough to throw grenades.

One soldier escaped capture by crawling in the darkness through two enemy machinegun positions and rolling down the hill toward safety.

"We were way outnumbered," Corporal Pemberton said. "They were all around us. What we need is lots more Marines."

This remark had a familar sound. It is what the Army has been saying for the last month—"We need lots more soldiers."

Fire Put Out Finally After Search for Site

There was plenty of smoke but where was the fire?

That was the problem confronting firemen when they responded to an alarm at the Gordon Hotel, 916 16th st. nw., at about noon yesterday.

The upper floors of the six-story hotel were filled with smoke. The blaze was finally located. Canvas and plywood on the roof had caught fire.

Once located, the fire was speedily extinguished. The commotion tied up traffic in the vicinity of 16th and K sts. nw. for about 30 minutes.

1950 Cotton Crop 36% Below 1949

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Crop Reporting Board yesterday broke the bad news that this year's cotton crop will be 36 percent less than last year, and about three million bales—or about one third—short of normal domestic requirements.

The shortage resulted from a confused cotton acreage allocation law passed late last year. Varying interpretations put upon its provisions in different States resulted in only about 18,678,000 acres being planted instead of about 21 million its authors promised.

No Shortage Seen

Cotton experts last night said there was little danger of an acute shortage, however. Heavy carryovers from the 1948 and 1949 crops, totaling about seven million bales, are considered ample to meet all forseeable demands. Normal requirements are for about nine million bales for domestic consumption and five million for export.

The estimate was for 10,308,000 bales, or 5,820,000 bales less than the 16,128,000 bales harvested last year.

New York futures shot up as much as $8.45 a bale (500 pounds) before profit taking trimmed the gain. They closed from $4.15 to $4.50 a bale above Monday's close. New Orleans spot cotton closed $4.05 a bale higher than on Monday.

At the same time, the Agriculture Department revealed that Government price-support loans and Government inventories of cotton have melted like snow in the last few weeks.

Out of 3,190,150 bales of 1949 cotton that had been put under Government price support loans, more than 2,600,000 have been redeemed. On July 27 only 500,627 bales were under loan, and at least a third of these have been redeemed since that date, officials estimated.

Bales Under Loan

A total of 5,271,000 bales of 1948 cotton were put under loan. Farmers redeemed 1,490,000 bales. The Government placed the remainder, 3,781,369 bales, in a pool. By July 26, the Government had sold 612,169 bales of the pooled 1948 cotton. Since that time sales have been held every other day. Estimates last night were that total sales now may reach 1,500,000 bales, leaving only about 1,600,000 on hand.

Total Government investments in cotton, which on April 30 were about a billion dollars, are expected to have declined to about one-third of that figure.

The cotton pooling law, which operates on a "heads-I-win, tails-you-lose" formula, was put through Congress during the war by the potent cotton State lawmakers. When World War II broke out, the Commodity Credit Corporation had tremendous stocks of cotton it had bought to maintain prices between 1935 and 1941. It sold this cotton, largely to other Government agencies, at a substantial profit.

Now, however, when the Government forecloses a price-support loan on cotton, it must "pool" that cotton. Each bale is stored with the grower's name attached. If CCC sells the cotton at a profit, even to another Government agency, it must return the profit to the original grower, even though he gave up possession of it through foreclosure of the loan, years before. If, however, the Government should sell the pooled cotton at a loss, the Government must assume the loss.

Group Shelves Service Family Pay Hike Plan

By the United Press

The House Armed Services Committee yesterday virtually junked plan for record high allowances for servicemen's dependents and asked the military services not to call up men with big families against their will.

The committee's views were given to top Defense Department personnel experts in a closed-door session.

Members opposed an Administration proposal to give wives of enlisted men $75 a month, with an additional $25 monthly for each child. They said they wanted no repetition of cases in which privates with eight or more children drew payments equal to those of high-ranking officers.

Housing Allowances

Instead, they asked defense officials to draw up a bill extending housing allowances to enlisted men of the three lowest grades. Enlisted men above those grades now get $67.50 in so-called "quarters" allowances if they have one or more dependents.

Committee Chairman Carl A. Vinson, (D., Ga.), proposed that men of the three lowest ranks get quarters allowances of $45 a month if they have one dependent, and $67.50 if they have two or more.

This would mean a ceiling of $67.50 for such family allowances. Under the Administration plan, an extension of the World War II method, families could get more than $300 a month if they had 10 or more children.

But while members were anxious not to hand out huge payments to dependents, they were equally firm in insisting that men with little rank and big families should not be drafted at all.

Deferred From Draft

Currently men with dependents are deferred from the draft by Presidential directive. However, men with big families are being called to duty as members of reserve units.

The Administration proposal for dependency pay would have required servicemen to contribute $30 of their pay to the total allotment.

Under Vinson's plan, each man would have to allot 50 percent of his pay for support of his family, but his contribution would not lessen the amount provided by the Government.

Alaska Strike Hits Security, Johnson Says

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson yesterday said President Truman agrees with him that a housing construction strike in Alaska is "jeopardizing the security of the United States."

Johnson said the strike is holding back construction of defense housing, and that consequently the is dependent upon expansion of housing, and htat consequently the security of the whole country is affected.

Johnson said that the AFL steamfitters' and plumbers' union is striking at defense projects at Fairbanks and Anchorage, seeking a raise of $2.50 an hour in pay, double pay for overtime, and room and board outside the cities.

The Mediation Conciliation Service said the dispute at Fairbanks had been settled.

Second Son Born To Devereuxes

Baltimore, Aug. 8 (AP).—Brigadier Gen. James P. S. Devereux, who commanded the Marines in the defense of Wake Island, became the father of another son today.

The baby was born in Johns Hopkins Hospital. Mrs. Devereux is the former Rachel Clarke Cooke.

They have another son, two years old. General Devereux has a third son, 14, by his first wife, who died in 1942 while he was a prisoner of the Japanese.

Devereux is the Republican candidate for the House of Representatives from the Maryland Second district. He is unopposed for his party's nomination in the September 18 primaries.

Perfect Reward for Achievement!

WHEN A MAN PLANS and dares and endeavors until he achieves something out of the ordinary—few would deny him some taste of the fruits of his labor.

"Tis toil's reward that sweetens industry."

"As you have sown, so also shall you reap."

"According to the labour, so is the reward."

And we believe sincerely that—for the average man—there is no sweeter personal reward for achievement than a Cadillac car.

First of all, it is the perfect symbol of attainment. In almost every community where adequate highways exist, Cadillac is known and recognized as the overwhelming favorite of the world's distinguished people.

And few possessions, indeed, can give so much personal happiness to their owners—during so many days in the year.

A Cadillac car is a constant joy to drive. You can sit at the wheel, for hour after hour, completely at ease. Many owners say they drive hundreds of miles each week—just for pleasure and relaxation.

And it adds so much to your satisfaction to know that economy goes with you—each mile you drive.

It actually costs less to buy the lower-priced Cadillacs than certain models of numerous other makes of cars. A single tankful of gasoline will usually suffice for a full day's drive. And the full lifespan of a Cadillac has never yet been measured.

If you are one who has planned and labored until you've earned something special for yourself—come in and see us.

We know you'd enjoy a Cadillac—and even your severest critic would have to admit that it's a practical car to buy.

P.S.: Perhaps you know some modest man who ought to read this message. If so, we think you'd be doing right if you brought it to his attention.

U. S. to Step Up Arms Cargoes To W. Europe

The Defense Department announced plans yesterday to step up shipment of arms to European allies to strengthen them against Communist aggression.

Officials predicted the flow of shipments will be doubled or tripled in the next few months.

Two modern warships will be turned over to the French Navy at Philadelphia next Saturday. They are 1240-ton escort vessels, similar to two vessels previously turned over to the Netherlands Government under the Military Assistance Program.

Sixteen other ships, including six landing vessels for French Indo-China, are slated for transfer soon

The two ships being given to the French are the Samuel S. Miles and the Riddle. Both were built in 1943 and saw convoy and antisubmarine service in World War II.

Jail Interferes With Youth's Date For Draft Exam

The date between Thomas C. Nichols, 19, of Wheaton, Md., and the United States Army was delayed yesterday—perhaps for as much as a year—by Silver Spring Police Court Trial Magistrate William B. Wheeler.

According to police, Nichols has been breaking windows as an avocation this summer, 32 panes in all, most of them the large store-front variety.

Wheeler sentenced Nichols to serve not more than one year in the Maryland Reformatory, for breaking windows in eight Wheaton stores early Monday morning. He sentenced Nichols to serve a concurrent sentence of not more than 90 days for smashing windows in a Silver Spring antique store August 1, and fined him $12.50 for disorderly conduct at a Wheaton carnival.

Nichols was scheduled to report for a pre-induction physical when he was arrested at his home. He pleaded innocent to all the charges.

Cook's Tour

Warm Chow Can Make Up For a Lot

With U. S. 24th Division in Korea, Aug. 9 (AP).—GIs still like to eat. A good meal makes a whale of a difference when everything else is loused up.

Sergt. Virgil Burgan will tell you this. Burgan, 33, of St. Charles, Va., is mess sergeant for Headquarters Company of the Twenty-fourth Division's Nineteenth Infantry Regiment.

He would rather cook than fly—and he has done plenty of both.

Burgan went right into the mess when he joined the Army in 1939. When war broke out, he volunteered for the Air Corps and early in 1942 became tail gunner on a Flying Fortress in Europe. After 25 missions he returned to the States and became a mess sergeant again. He left the Army in 1945, but reenlisted last year.

Burgan's main job now is to keep fighting men well fed.

"Hot chow means we gotta pitch right in when we reach a place to have the stuff ready when the boys want to eat," he said.

The many moves of the 24th—nine bloody noses and retreats since its arrival in Korea—have "kept us busy setting up and taking down and setting up again."

"We serve three meals a day to an average of 225 men—but we never have the average," he continued.

"Our toughest time was on Sunday, July 16, on the Kum River at Taejon. Four cooks were killed and one wounded and we lost lots of mess equipment in the retreat. I and three cooks worked night and day feeding 600 to 700 men daily—most of them stragglers.

"One night we were cleaned out completely and we had to borrow supplies for the next day's meals. We served 75 gallons of coffee to stragglers that night."

Ruhr's Place In Defense of West Studied

Frankfurt, Aug. 8 (AP). — The Western Allies are considering the industrial rearmament of western Germany to help strengthen Europe against possible Communist aggression.

Authoritative sources today said that American, British and French experts are holding secret meetings on how the Ruhr's vast production facilities could be thrown behind the effort to develop Europe's defense system.

They are expected to propose broad relaxation of many of the security controls clamped on German industry after the war.

These sources said the French and British are less strongly opposed to development of west Germany's industrial potential as a result of the Korean war and the prospect of a European steel shortage.

No decisions have been reached on how west Germany could be included as a producer for the European armaments industry, these sources said. But Allied officials in Germany soon will send recommendations to the Washington, London and Paris governments.

The forthcoming Foreign Ministers' Conference then will make a final decision on the matter.

Authoritative sources here expressed belief that before the end of the year western Germany's sprawling industry will be helping develop the Western defenses.

They stressed that this would not mean German rearmament. Instead, the Germans would deliver coal, steel, machinery and armament accessories to help build up the defense machines of Europe. There is no thought now of permitting the Germans to turn out guns.

Britain Asks U. S. to Pay Half of Cost Increase

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Britain has asked the United States for about $1,344,000,000 in money and material to help rearm by 1954.

This means the United States is being asked to pitch in about half the amount by which Britain proposes to boost her military budget in the next three years, qualified government informants said today.

Belgium to Up Defense Outlay $100 Million

Brussels, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Belgian government joined the Atlantic Pact rearmament drive today with a proposal to raise its defense budget by 5 billion francs (100 million dollars).

Premier Jean Duvieusart told a grave and silent Chamber of Deputies the government has decided to raise total defense spending by that much for the period expiring at the end of 1951.

The defense budget for 1950 is 8,500,000,000 francs (170 million dollars).

The plans to face mounting world tension drove the crisis over King Leopold's return to the throne out of Parliament for the day.

The chamber postponed the debate on Leopold until Wednesday in order to hear the Premier's statement.

Five Atlantic pact nations, pressed by the United States, have now proposed a total emergency defense spending program of $15,422,225,000.

Leaders Tell Council of Europe Nations Must Speed Armament

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 8 (AP). Political figures of Britain, France and Italy urged before the Council of Europe's Consultative Assembly today a speedup in the West's common defense efforts.

At the same time, they charged the Committee of Foreign Ministers—the council's upper house—has failed to push European unity They ignored a council statute placing national defense matters outside the scope of the council, which is a sort of international parliament.

Andre Philip, a French Socialist leader, called for setting up a massive West European army.

Maurice Edelman, a British Laborite, said western Europe should go on a virtual war footing.

Enzo Giacchero, Italian assemblyman, appealed also for speed in bolstering defenses.

British Conservatives in the assembly announced a counterproposal for pooling Europe's steel and coal production.

It differs from French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman's plan in this respect:

The Schuman plan calls for setting up a supranational authority outside the individual governments to control output. The British plan proposes that the pool be under a committee of foreign ministers with a modified veto right over important decisions.

The British plan was announced in a news conference and later submitted for inclusion on the assembly agenda.

Conservative leader Winston Churchill did not indorse the British plan. Spokesmen said he did not want to commit his party formally.

Mrs. Astin, Socially Prominent, Sues Ex-Husband for $10,000

Socially prominent Mrs. Marjorie Mondell Astin, 44, yesterday filed a District Court suit demanding that her former husband, Alfons B. Landa, 52, pay her $10,000.

She said that he promised to pay her $5000 when she remarried in addition to $150 a month alimony until that date. Her suit says that he failed to make good on the $5000 pledge, and that she has suffered $5000 in additional damages as the result.

Mrs. Astin married Landa, a well-known lawyer, in 1930 and divorced him in 1942. She has now married Mills Astin, clerk of the Senate committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. Landa is now married to the former Consuela Morgan Thaw.

When informed of Mrs. Astin's suit, Landa, who resides at 6 Kalorama cir., said:

"This is a legal argument over whether the $5000 involved is alimony, which I say it is, or a debt which is the claim of the other side. The courts will have to decide it, I guess. It is a lawyer's argument."

When a reporter called Mrs. Astin at her 2153 California st. nw. home, she said:

"I most certainly did not think there would be publicity when I brought this suit. But, it most certainly is not a frivolous suit, you can bet on that."

8000 Vending Machines Join Chest Campaign

Dr. Davies Demands King Apology for Handwriting Request

persons prominent in All Souls Church:

"Mr. King's request is insulting and offensive and apparently an expression of personal rancor I have asked my attorney, Wendell Berge, to demand from him a public apology. In the interest of justice to Mr. Williams I shall nevertheless comply with the request.

"Meanwhile, I suggest that Mr. King display some of the integrity he questions in others by having an honest investigation of these letters made instead of using his exertions only to justify his prosecution of Robert Williams. Williams has been seen by three psychiatrists, two of them experts in sexual pathology, all of whom testify to the improbability of his guilt. He has also taken the sodium amytal test.

"The case against Williams has been weak from the beginning and King knows it. He has admitted to me that he decided to prosecute only after considerable hesitation and doubt. Now he is reckless. The time has come for a committee of citizens and psychiatrists to investigate the conduct of this case by the Corporation Counsel's Office."

Berge wrote King:

"Dr. A. Powell Davies has asked me to serve as his counsel in respect to the request for handwriting samples and fingerprints, as reported in today's press, in connection with the Williams case.

"Although Dr. Davies is vacationing on his farm in the Shenandoah Valley, he will comply with any request for cooperation from your office.

"However, Dr. Davies is deeply increased about the insinuation, contained in your statement as reported in the press, that he may have been writing anonymous letters to you concerning the Williams case. On his behalf, I demand a public apology for this wholly unwarranted statement."

King, when read the Davies and Berge statements, said:

"I make no effort to try cases in the newspapers. That's what we have courts for."

He said he decided to prosecute Williams "the minute" the case was presented to him.

He recalled that police had checked out fingerprints from persons in his office and found only one print that matched. It was that of Joseph Lowther, who read one of the letters.

King has directed police now to investigate other fingerprints on the letters to determine, if possible, the author. It was in this connection, he said, that he had asked for the handwriting samples.

"We have eliminated the prosecution," he said, "why not eliminate the defense?"

Meanwhile, Paul Connolly, Williams' attorney, has asked that the handwriting on the letters be checked against that of all perverts known to the police department.

Oklahoma Bad Man Shot By Police in Holdup

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—An Oklahoma bad man was shot down by police today while his two companions blasted their way out of a police trap in a fashionable neighborhood, escaping with $17,000 in jewels.

Police surprised the trio while they were in the process of staging a stickup robbery in the home of wealthy oilman E. R. Brann. A gun fight broke out. One gunman, Flemming van Derrick, 33, Chickasha, Okla., was wounded in both knees and captured.

Extremely Lethal Killer

A Thrilling, 48-Hour Chase—After Germ

By Sonia Stein

THE most terrifying villain in the world is stalking the screen in "Panic in the Streets." It is a villain so terrifying that no country has ever dared unleash it against another country. The villain? A germ.

"Panic in the Streets," which opens this morning at the Playhouse, is a tightly woven story of the search for a man who is unknowingly incubating the deadly pneumonic plague—a highly contagious variation of the bubonic plague, which the Middle Ages knew and feared as the Black Death.

Since the man who is wandering the streets of New Orleans, a living bacteria culture factory, is a murderer whose identity is unknown, he's not easy to bring to heel. Consider also, that all evidence concerning him has been burned to a heap of ashes along with his victim, since corpses containing pneumonic plague are regarded with an unwelcome eye even by the city morgue.

Furthermore, the man who died of lead poisoning, genus bullet, a couple of hours before the plague would have had him, had been smuggled into the country—a mode of entry which leaves few traces.

That's what the police and the Public Health Service have to start with. In a word, nothing.

From nothing, the New Orleans police—represented here by Paul Douglas—and the Public Health Department—represented by Richard Widmark—find something: a guy you couldn't care less if he died of plague or hanging or a shot in the intestinal fortitude.

"PANIC IN THE STREETS," at the Playhouse. Directed by Elia Kazan. Screenplay by Richard Murphy. Adaptation by Daniel Fuchs, from a story by Edna and Edward Anhalt. Produced by Sol. C. Siegel. A 20th Century-Fox film.

Richard L. Coe is on vacation. His column will be resumed on his return.

But the entire police department, public health department and the audience couldn't be happier to find him.

Many of the actors in this film were pried out of the woodwork where Director Elia Kazan was shooting the picture. Others came straight out of the New Orleans Police Department.

As you might suspect, they fit the parts they play like a book fits its jacket, and heading the group are several professional actors who fit borrowed characters no less exactly.

Richard Widmark, does handsomely as the public health officer who has to fight the incipient epidemic with the help of public officials who don't begin to understand the enormity of the situation. The scene in which Widmark, pushing against time, explains the problem to the lay mind with considerably more impatience than success, is straight out of everybody's experience in some matter or other.

As the police captain who has to sift one unknown rat out of all those who infest the New Orleans waterfront within 48 hours, Douglas is clearly the man for the job. Methodical, tireless, fearless and—fortunately—succesful.

A Flat-Nosed Menace

The unsavoury band of small time racketeers who officiated at the demise of the original plague carrier, are obviously nobody to play games with, sick or well. Walter Jack Palance, the top dog in the untidy kennel, is a flat-nosed menace of no integrity whatever. Zero Mostel, known for his comedy work in nightclubs across the country, makes a fine yes-man, loyal to the wrong cause.

Guy Thomajan does a good job as Poldi, the cousin of the victim. The boss suspects him of having got something from the dead man. Why else would the police be combing the whole town? He had got something all right, but nothing the boss would have wanted had he known.

Besides the tense scenes of the search, the chase and the kill, there are a few wonderfully real scenes of Widmark at home with his wife, played by Barbara Bel Geddes, and his little boy. I don't think dialogue has ever been captured more honestly than it is in those early scenes.

The picture ends with the plague nipped in the bud, but there's no raise for the young medical man. Even his next-door neighbors don't give him credit for the exhausting 48 hours he put in at risk of life and limb. More realistic than that, you cannot get.

Kazan's directing throughout is superb. This is the picture in which Kazan felt he had finally got hold of the movie technique after making six highly successful pictures before it. I think he's got hold of it, all right.

Closing of Canteen In Hyattsville Asked

Whether the Teen Age Canteen conducted in the 42d Avenue School in Hyattsville should be closed will be discussed at a public hearing by the Hyattsville City Council on August 21.

Scheduling of the hearing followed a request by a number of citizens at Monday night's council meeting for the canteen's closing. The group contended it is the scene of "disorderly behavior." The sponsors of the canteen, County Police Superintendent Ralph W. Brown and representatives of Sydney-Farmer-Butler American Legion Post, have been invited to participate in the hearing.

Filling Stations In N. J. to Close During Price War

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 8 (U.P.). More than 2000 filling station operators voted at a tumultuous session today to close shop for a week beginning Wednesday morning in protest against the gasoline price war in New Jersey.

Some dealers predicted thousands of other stations also would close Wednesday. Representatives of the American Automobile Association warned that violence might result.

The decision to close was virtually unanimous. The retail dealers also voted to ask Gov. Alfred Driscoll to name a committee to investigate the cause of the price war.

AEC Manager Quits In Split With Dean

the statement and added that "while I'm sorely tempted to, I don't care to comment on it."

AEC "Deeply Regrets"

The Commission referred questioners to an AEC statement, issued ahead at Wilson's blast, saying the AEC "deeply regrets the loss of Mr. Wilson's services" and asserting:

"The organization is fully prepared for the demands of its expanding program."

The Commission announced that Carleton Shugg, who has been Wilson's deputy, will be acting general manager. The job consists of carrying out policies and administrative duties on instructions from the Commission.

Wilson's blast at Dean found little support on Capitol Hill, at least immediately. Senator McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Committee, announced that the committee had unanimously authorized him to "express its confidence" in dean.

Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), a committee member, said he is glad Wilson is leaving.

"I could never see that he had what it took to be general manager," Johnson said. "In my opinion he was a complete flop in the job and already had been there too long."

Criticism Called 'Regrettable.' ...

Johnson praised the ability of Shugg, Wilson's temporary successor, observing: "I hope his appointment becomes permanent."

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), another committee member, said:

"I have been favorably impressed with the vigorous, realistic activities of Gordon Dean, the new chairman, and I have a high regard for the integrity and ability of Carleton Shugg, now acting general manager.

Senator Millikin (R., Colo.) said he has "much confidence" in Dean and commented:

"One of the past criticisms of the commission is that it did not know enough about what was going on. It is regrettable that Mr. Wilson is criticizing the commission's efforts to better the administration of its own affairs."

It was largely on the location of the line between duties of the general manager and of the commission that the Wilson-Dean split occurred.

"Management by Committee"

Wilson's statement complained of a trend toward assumption by the commission itself of a more direct role in administration.

He said he feared the result would be a "cumbersome, slow-moving administrative machine which is incapable of giving the country the kind of direction needed to maintain and increase our leadership in the atomic field."

With reference to Chairman Dean, who took over as top man in the AEC last month after serving as a member since May, 1949, Wilson said the relationship between chairman and general manager "is an intimate and personal one."

It must be marked by "a very high degree of confidence" if the task is to go forward as it should, adding:

"I regret that I do not have the degree of confidence in the chairman of the Commission which I believe it is essential that I should have in order to serve him and the Commission effectively in administering the program."

Wilson mentioned "difficult operating and administrative problems" which he said would arise even under the best conditions and went indirectly into the question of the qualifications of his new chief:

"To make it workable requires in the chairman exceptional experience and understanding of administration of large undertakings as well as a keen appreciation on the part of the other commissioners of the undesirable consequences of management by committee."

Salary $15,000 a Year

Wilson assumed the $15,000-a-year general managership at the end of 1946 when the original commission under Chairman David E. Lilienthal took over the atomic program from the Army's Manhattan District, which built the atomic bomb.

Wilson, who is 39, first entered Government service as one of the two original members of the National Defense Research Committee, created by the Council of National Defense.

When the NDRC was succeeded by the Office of Scientific Research and Development, he became executive assistant to Dr. Vannevar Bush, its director.

In 1945 Wilson was lent by the OSRD to the State Department as an adviser on atomic energy. When the State Department Board of Consultants on the International Control of Atomic Energy was set up under Chairman David E. Lilienthal in January, 1946, he became its secretary.

In March of that year, he left the Government to become vice president and director of the National Research Corp., in Boston.

Wilson was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1932 and was appointed assistant to President Karl T. Compton. He later served as a special adviser to Dr. Bush, then vice president of MIT. He first joined the National Research Corp. in 1937.

Dean, a lawyer who calls Vista, Calif., his home, is a former law partner of Senator McMahon.

He became chairman in July, succeeding Sumner T. Pike who had served as acting chairman since the resignation of Lilienthal February 15.

George Warns On Tax Bill

an excess-profits tax to the president's bill.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) said he doubted the Finance Committee would add the tax to the interim bill in view of the Treasury position.

"All of us want to take the profits out of war, but it is a very difficult thing to work out," said Byrd. "We are in a desperate situation, financially and militarily. I am going to support an excess-profits tax when the Treasury thinks it necessary."

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said he is "inclined to go along with the Treasury recommendations" but hasn't finally made up his mind on the O'Mahoney amendment.

Across the Capitol, Representative Wilbur Mills (D., Ark.), who recently tried to tie profits taxation to the renegotiation of war contracts bill, said he still "hopes" Congress will act before January.

Snyder meanwhile made it plain at his press conference that the Administration has no immediate plans to seek a profits levy.

"We would like Congress to complete the interim tax bill now pending," he said.

Saying more comprehensive legislation, probably including an excess-profits tax, will be recommended at an "appropriate time," he said the Administration has no intention of permitting "undue" profits. He pointed out that renegotiation of war contracts legislation will recoup some of the profits and that six billion dollars was recaptured this way in World War II.

"War Might Be Over"

George also stressed use of the renegotiation of contracts device to recapture profits but said he wasn't ruling out an excess-profits tax starting next January "if conditions justify it."

"Of course, the war might be over by that time," he added.

The Georgian said he is convinced that neither the President nor Secretary Snyder favor tying the profits tax to the interim bill, because "they want it passed quickly and they know hearings on an excess profits tax would delay it."

He said the tax bill couldn't possibly clear Congress before October if the profits levy is made a part of it, and the combined legislation might not clear Congress this session.

Soviets Wait Edge in Strength Before Striking, Walsh Says

War with Russia is not likely in the immediate future, according to the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service.

Before turning the cold war hot, he said, Russia will concentrate on propaganda and make sure the balance of power is in her favor before she strikes the first blow.

Father Walsh said we would be justified in using the atom bomb against Russia before she uses it on us, only if we are certain she is about to attack, since no nation would attack without it.

Father Walsh spoke in Gaston Hall Monday in the last of a series of five lectures on the United States-Russia situation.

Before waging war, Father Walsh said, Russia will try to convince "the small nations of Europe that they are betting on the wrong horse." Their propaganda system "pours forth lies in every public place, and our own radio, the Voice of America, is inadequate against it, as only 18 percent of the Russian people have access to radios." Many of these radios cannot pick up overseas broadcasts, Father Walsh said.

Another method of attack now being used, he said, is Russia's attempt to strengthen her United Nations support by trying to get membership for her satellites.

"What kind of mentality is this," Father Walsh asked, "that can start an aggressive war in Korea, and in the space of the same month accept the presidency of a world peace organization?"

Father Walsh traveled widely in Russia in the mid-twenties, representing the Vatican and American relief organizations.

Decision Seen Today On Payment to D. C.

A Capitol decision is slated to be made today on whether the Federal payment to the District for the current fiscal year will be 12 million dollars or $10,800,000.

The Senate voted the higher, the House the lower figure. A conference committee will meet in executive session at 10 a. m. today to discuss the difference.

Hopeful Democrats

The Democratic Party announces the purchase of a six-story building at 1733 De Sales st. as its permanent, all-year-round party headquarters. Hitherto the Democrats have camped out in rented headquarters in Washington between presidential elections, blossoming out, during presidential years, to expanded (and expensive) quarters in Hotel Biltmore in New York, though the bill has proved on occasion sometimes difficult to settle. In those days, of course, the Republicans always had the money and the Democrats the hopes. Now, after 17 years of occupancy of the White House, and nearly 160 years of contemplation of the wisdom of Jefferson's belief that political and governmental activities should center in Washington, a new confidence has come over the party, if this purchase is any guide. Unlike most officeholders when they they come to Washington, the Democrats feel they can settle down. Chairman Boyle is so ebullient in announcing the purchase that he went on to predict the defeat of Senator Taft! Optimism of this nature is like that of the man who says the bottle is half full when it is half empty.

Casualty Figures

There is plenty of reason why it would be unwise for the Defense Department to give out casualty figures in Korea as they happen. Anyone with combat experience knows that the enemy often can profit when he knows what losses have been sustained on the other side in a given operation. Moreover, aside from the question of security, it is necessary for the armed forces to doublecheck their reports to make sure they are accurate (and accuracy is difficult in the confusion of battle) before next of kin are notified. Thus it by no means implies bad faith that casualty announcements are running three to four weeks behind the event.

Nor is it surprising that actual casualties probably are considerably in excess of the figures disclosed so far. The fighting in Korea has been bitter, even savage; and until now at least the Americans have been at a severe disadvantage. During World War II the usual practice was to announce casualties at the end of specific campaigns. That obviously cannot be done in Korea, since the fighting so far has been one continuous campaign. Incidentally, a good deal of room for error arises in reports of men missing in action. Substantial numbers of men initially reported missing have managed to get back to American lines, and thus original figures have been exaggerated. Indeed, until a thorough check is made it often is not possible to tally the dead and wounded accurately except for those men who actually can be counted.

This should not mean, however, that interim casualty figures could not be completed and announced prior to notification of relatives. Military commanders of course must be the judges of when the release of over-all figures no longer would be of benefit to the enemy. But certainly after figures have been given to Congress thay ought to become public property. At least they would enable the people better to understand what is going on. And although there is no substance to the feeling that defense officials are seeking to "cushion" the impact of the facts on the public, they ought to be scrupulous to avoid even the suspicion.

Gomez' Responsibility

The auspices under which Dr. Laureano Gomez has assumed the presidency of Colombia are not exactly bright. Dr. Gomez, a Conservative, was elected last November in what amounted to a sham vote, for the Liberal Party, charging preelection violence and intimidation, boycotted the election. Since that time Colombia has been under a state of siege, with civil liberties suspended and rigorous censorship imposed on the press.

Dr. Gomez' accession does not change the split personality from which the country suffers. For example, although Dr. Gomez and his predecessor, Mariano Ospina Perez, are Conservatives, the Liberals have controlled Congress. Yet Congress was suspended when the state of siege was imposed, and it was not permitted to reopen on its regular date of July 20. Meanwhile bloodshed has continued, partly because of intransigeant elements and partly because of an overzealous national police. Strangely enough, this violence comes at a time when Colombia is relatively prosperous from high coffee prices. Although there are extremes of wealth, party lines cut across all segments of the population. Whatever part Liberal high-handedness had in precipitating the breach, it is plain that the Conservatives intend to continue it through one-party government.

Dr. Gomez himself is a man who arouses a good deal of curiosity. After the abortive Bogota revolt of 1948, when he was Foreign Minister, he fled to Spain. He is known to be an admirer of Franco, whose hospitality he enjoyed for more than a year, and it is possible to see in his inaugural speech some questionable implications:

> I invite my contemporaries to change the customary style of our collective practices. We are all convinced that we belong to a nation considerably backward in many aspects of civil and economic organization.

That could be an argument for the corporative state. On the other hand, on several recent occasions Dr. Gomez has made considerable point of his friendship for the United States, promising, among other things, favorable treatment of investments. Also, he and his predecessor have firmly supported the United Nations and the United States on Korea.

Thus Dr. Gomez' policies will remain an enigma until they are put into practice. He could take a big step toward gaining outside confidence, however, by lifting the siege and censorship. It is easy to minimize the difficulties Colombia is undergoing, but the argument that the people are volatile and unprepared is the sort of argument that dictators always have used to justify continued suppression. The way to end siege and censorship is simply to end them.

Freedom And Security

The President has grasped both horns of the great dilemma of our society—the dilemma of protecting our liberties while safeguarding our security—in a singularly statesmanlike message to Congress. As Governor Dewey pointed out in his famous debate with Mr. Stassen at Portland, May 18, 1948, "We have 27 laws on the books, and I have the whole list of them in front of me, outlawing every conceivable act of subversion against the United States." However, agents like Gold who worked with Fuchs succeeded in evading all 27 of these laws in stealing the greatest secret in the history of this country in behalf of its enemies. It was crystal clear from then on that the time was overdue for a review of the laws against subversion with the view to improvement in case the law and not enforcement was defective. But the "there ought to be a law" pressure upon Congress produced bills containing clauses which threaten the liberties enshrined in the Bill of Rights—the Mundt bill, S-595, and the Hobbs bill.

The President's answer to the dilemma falls into two categories. He would provide an extended statute of limitations beyond the existing three years in peacetime espionage cases; require persons who have received instruction from a foreign government or political party in espionage or subversion tactics to register under the Foreign Agents Registration Act; give broader authority than now exists for the President to establish security regulations concerning the protection of military bases and other national defense installations. The second category of recommendations has to do with aliens. Legislation is proposed permitting the Attorney General to exercise supervision over aliens subject to deportation—legislation that would require them under sanction of criminal penalties to report their whereabouts and activities at regular intervals. All these proposals have been either suggested or backed from time to time in this newspaper. Another thing, in our opinion, ought to be done. There should be, as there was in the war, registration of the financial statements of groups appealing for public funds, for all subversive activity has to be financed, and could not exist if the light of day were cast upon the nature and source of its financing.

This program of action is vital to the defense of our country. It is, indeed, first business on the home front. Some people will not be satisfied that it goes far enough, but they are apt, in their over-excitement over the dangers in our midst, to overlook the liberties upon which our society was built. They likewise err in other respects. For one thing, they would push this country in the direction of a police state. Such action endangers rather than adds to security. For the history of police states, as the President reminds Congress, is marked > by successive purges, and growing concentration camps, as their governments strike out blindly in fear of violent revolt. Once a government is committed to the principle of silencing the voice of opposition, it has only one way to go, and that is down the path of increasingly repressive measures, until it becomes a source of terror to all its citizens and creates a country where everyone lives in fear.

For another thing, extreme legislation of the nature of existing bills would serve Communist ends in discrediting our system of constitutional liberties. Finally, the extremists forget that laws themselves don't protect; what mainly count are the administration of those laws and the cooperation of public opinion, and the best insulation against inside danger comes from strict enforcement and from what the President calls "a vigorous, functioning democracy which succeeds in meeting the needs of its people." Mr. Truman has furnished Congress with a new starting point in tightening up the laws against subversion.

AEC Upset

There will be some tendency to look upon the brusque resignation of Carroll Wilson as general manager of the Atomic Energy Commission as rocking a boat which has enjoyed pretty rough sailing. The AEC had been in a turmoil after Chairman David Lilienthal left in February, and the restoration of any degree of equanimity was not helped by the fight over the renomination of Sumner Pike. With the appointment of Gordon Dean as the new chairman the hope, in Congress at least, was that things would settle down.

Mr. Wilson's blast that he lacks "confidence" in Mr. Dean and that members of the commission have been taking over too much of his job sounds impetuous and out of character. There is no manual for relationships between commissioners and the general manager except that there must be confidence on both sides and that in broad terms it is the function of the commissioners to determine policy and of the general manager to execute it. Under Mr. Lilienthal Mr. Wilson had a pretty free hand in handling commission operations; it is perhaps natural that under a different chairman who concerned himself more with details Mr. Wilson should be unhappy.

There likewise is no manual for relationships between the AEC and Congress except those spelled out in the McMahon Act. Some observers, however, have become concerned over the amount of congressional domination of, rather than mere cooperation with, the commission. In other words, the relationship between the AEC and the Joint Atomic Energy Committee is at best delicate, and it would be easy for Congress to usurp the role of actual commission management. The fact that Mr. Dean is a former law partner of Chairman McMahon of the Joint Committee has increased such fears.

It is no secret that Mr. Wilson has not been popular with members of Congress, partly because he has had a tendency to be somewhat stiff and pedantic. Indeed, Mr. Wilson may have felt himself the victim of a squeeze play in the pending legislation to require periodic confirmation of the general manager by Congress. It is desirable, of course, that the general manager, as well as individual commissioners, enjoy the complete support of Congress, and it is noteworthy that the full Atomic Energy Committee have expressed their full confidence in Mr. Dean. Nevertheless, Mr. Wilson's resignation helps to dramatize a situation of growing seriousness in the business of atomic energy. The fact is that, because of the barriers of secrecy and monopoly, no one on the outside knows precisely what is going on. This increasing seclusion has been abetted by Congress, and the commission has been retreating more and more within itself. Certainly this is a bad omen for the broader use of atomic energy. Whatever the merit or demerit of Mr. Wilson's charges, to the extent that they show that something is wrong they may do a public service.

Remember Yalta

The curious thing about the rapid warming up of the cold war is that the place of diplomacy in the struggle has grown in significance. There are many blows that can be struck for peace which are available to our diplomacy. We come back to the desirability of denouncing the 1945 compact at Yalta. The document is such a thing of shreds and patches that the principle of respect for international obligations requires of the United States and Britain a denunciation of that instrument and a statement of particulars. Several times the opportunity has been provided; the last was when our new antiaggression policy in the Far East was announced June 26. However, though timing is sometimes all-important, there is no necessity to wait for time and place in exposing a cynical failure to carry out a solemn obligation.

In international law there is ample reason for a denunciation of the Yalta Pact. When a party to a contract fails to carry it out, the other signatory is at perfect liberty to withdraw his own obligation. This is simply the extension of the principle in domestic contracts which makes a contract null and void when it is "frustrated." What has happened to the undertakings arrived at at Yalta is now common knowledge. Balkan countries whose independence was pledged at Yalta are virtually incorporated in Soviet territory. Independence has been extinguished, freedom has been denied, and those countries have become vassals of Moscow. In the Far East the Yalta conferees agreed to roll back the map to 1895 in behalf of Russia. In that year, for instance, the Russians stole from the Chinese rail and port concessions in Manchuria, and these were restored to Russia as a bribe to come into the Pacific War, though nothing could have induced the Russians to keep out. These prizes have become the entering wedge for the Russification of Manchuria. Secretary Acheson in his National Press Club speech of January 12 said:

> Armed with these new powers, what is happening in China is that the Soviet Union is detaching the northern provinces of China from China and is attaching them to the Soviet Union. This process is complete in outer Mongolia. It is nearly complete in Manchuria, and I am sure that in inner Mongolia and in Sinkiang, there are very happy reports coming from Soviet agents to Moscow. This is what is going on. It is the detachment of these whole areas, vast areas—populated by Chinese—the detachment of these areas from China and their attachment to the Soviet Union.

It is bootless to lament what happened at Yalta. More constructive is to denounce the pact in behalf of the sacred principle of respect for international engagements. This is an elementary duty. The delay in so doing binds this country to the subversion of the deal as well as to the deal itself, and makes us accessory to both. Denunciation would also bring to the attention of the Chinese people the immorality that the Russians have practiced at their expense. Thus, in addition to putting the record straight, our diplomacy would be doing a service in the struggle with Russia that is going on in Asia. As time goes on Manchuria is bound to become the sharpest point of friction between China and Russia, and anything that can be done to keep the loss of Manchuria before the Chinese people is good diplomacy.

Congress' Immunity

I wish to take issue with your July 30 editorial on congressional immunity. You were quite correct in stating that the privilege sometimes has been "grossly abused," but I contest your bland statement that such abuse "does not, of course, invalidate the immunity itself." Why must one assume that the election to a seat in Congress automatically makes a politician a demigod, to be trusted with powers above the law as generally applicable to mere mortals? Why not attack the abuse at its roots, and amend the Constitution to abolish the congressional exemption from slander suits?

Your editorial justly pointed out, as the Supreme Court has observed, that the only justifiable purpose of the privilege as written into the Constitution is to enable the people's representatives "to execute the functions of their office without fear of prosecutions, civil or criminal." I would insert only the word "unjust" before "prosecutions" to agree entirely with that opinion.

Of course, it would be folly to jeopardize free debate by allowing any and every political or personal enemy of a Congressman to involve him in long and costly court proceedings on any flimsy pretext, but such tactics would only be used provided the party unjustly bringing suit could go unpunished. If, at the same time the immunity from suit were abolished, it were made a serious offense falsely to sue a Congressman for slander, and anyone losing such a suit were ruled to be ipso facto guilty of obstructing the workings of Congress (and subject to about 10 to 15 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine), such suits would not be undertaken lightly, nor for mere political gain. At the same time, where an airtight case could be proved against an obviously slanderous Congressman, the injured citizen could have redress in the courts. ALLEN F. CHEW.

Malik's Abuse

Sitting in over television on the August 1 session of the U. N. Security Council, I was struck by Mr. Malik's numerous mentions of the Philippines. He accused the United States, not once but several times, of aggression in the Philippines. His repeated, and unnecessary, direct references to the Philippines led me to wonder if the Russians are not planning to stir up trouble there for which they expect to blame us claiming that it was all our fault and that they had warned the world of it in advance.

I am also beginning to wonder if Mr. Herbert Hoover's advice was not sound when he advocated kicking the Russians out of the United Nations when they refused to participate in its proceedings in January and did nothing but obstruct its progress with vetoes prior to that.

It seems very clear that Russia is not using the United Nations as an instrument of peace but for propaganda and obstruction. EDWIN W. MAPHIS.

After listening over the radio to the proceedings of the U. N. Security Council, one can hardly abstain from expressing his revulsion over the deliberate perversion of truth and the scurrilous Soviet propaganda, which reached the public from the mouth of the Soviet representative Jacob Malik.

Common Defense

This summer, my wife and I have been touring France and England. I have observed the local sentiment regarding the Korean war. Everywhere I have found a reservoir of good will toward Americans, and a favorable press.

The pattern of Communist attacks on the democracies in Korea, French Indo-China and elsewhere, is quite clear—to bleed us white and run us into bankruptcy with many small wars.

We meet this threat to our freedom with divided efforts. We need one defense force, highly mobile, to move swiftly to any danger spot.

Our common defense demands political union, an Atlantic Federal Union.

Congress has under consideration a resolution to explore, with our fellow members of the North Atlantic Treaty, plans for a powerful Atlantic Federal Union. This is the time for all bold action, for the hour of the crisis is at hand. JAMES E. EDWARDS

"Spanish Omelet"

A daily reader, and great admirer of The Washington Post, I was surprised and disappointed at your August 3 editorial, "Spanish Omelet," in which you decried aid to Franco, calling attention to the fallacy of the theory that "the enemy of your enemy is your friend."

After all, wasn't that the basis of our alliance with Russia during World War II? Certainly the aftermath of that alliance has shown how disastrously wrong that concept may prove, but anyone who dared, back in 1943, to voice such heretical thoughts was denounced in no uncertain terms as a Nazi sympathizer. At their worst, Franco and his cohorts could never be a serious threat to world peace.

Of course, once bitten, twice shy, but it looks as if you would have us go all out to shun a repulsive, but possibly helpful worm (see Carlton J. H. Hayes, Wartime Mission in Spain) after years of nourishing a whole nest of vipers in our national bosom.
HELEN A. CLARK.
Washington.

The civil war which broke out in Spain in 1936 was the almost inevitable climax of many years of turbulence, violence, and social and political chaos. The war was immediately preceded by the election of a radical, left wing, "Popular Front" government which was supported by an electoral majority, but a minority of the popular vote—similar to the election of Lincoln in 1860, which precipitated our own Civil War.

Reform was undeniably overdue—as it was in Virginia in 1860, in Russia in 1918, or in Greece and China in 1949. Yet the radical and ruthless nature of these measures and the outspoken hostility of the government toward the large conservative and reactionary elements of the Spanish population produced a reaction which, when it came, split Spain fairly down the center.

If the ensuing struggle was a battle of Fascist against anti-Fascist, it was no less a battle of Communist against anti-Communist. Into that struggle the rival camps of Europe poured men, money and material to the limit of their capabilities. German and Italian pilots shot down Russian fighters as well as bombers furnished by the Popular Front government of France. Blackshirt legions grappled with French Communist volunteers or with an "Abraham Lincoln Brigade" now listed by our Government as a subversive organization. Far from being a Fascist coup d'etat, this was full-scale civil war, in which both factions were supported not only by large segments of the Spanish people, but by alien governments—including that of Soviet Russia—whose selfish interests lay with one side or the other.

Our own national interest, to the extent that it was involved at all, lay wholly with neither faction—nor did the legitimate sympathies of the American people. That the Spanish war was not more objectively reported by our press, that Americans cannot to this day view the question of Spain dispassionately in the light of their own national interest, can only be attributed to the undeniably pro-Soviet climate which pervaded the Western world—or its organs of public expression—during the period of these events. If the tragedy in Spain were repeated today, there is little question where our interests would lie.

No American need join the Nazi Party nor even the Catholic Church in order to feel thankful that communism was successfully, if ruthlessly, conquered in Spain—at no expense to us, for once—and that communism was thereby set back, at least, in France. Beyond that, as an American, he can regard Franco—or Salazar or Peron or Ibn Saud or the Shah of Iran—simply as the alien ruler of an alien state with which we have no basic conflict of interest at this time.

If we attain the day when recent history can be objectively reviewed, the unembellished record will probably show us that Franco, for all his faults, has probably acted in consonance with the national interests of the United States about as consistently as any of those nations of Western Europe—whichever they may be—so wistfully mentioned in your editorial as "our true friends."

Bombs In Korea

Two correspondents of yours recently asked that any weapon, including the atom bomb, should be used to end the Korean war quickly. They implied that this would not be immoral.

Montesquieu once wrote that three centuries of civilization had bequeathed to us a law of nature for which mankind could never be grateful enough, the law that nations should in time of war do each other the least possible harm. We needed not much more than three decades to destroy the greater part of this precious heritage of European-Christian heritage. We should be the more careful to preserve what is left of it.

There was much rightful indignation about the bombing of cities by the Germans during the first part of the Second World War. That done by the British and ourselves later was—correctly, I think—justified by the principle of retaliation. But this principle cannot be applied now in Korea. And it is a fundamental mistake to think that anything is right in war if it is likely to shorten the war. No end can justify every means.

We have no territorial interest in Korea. We are protecting the South Koreans against unjust aggression. If we do this by unjust means, then what are we fighting for?

Sharing The Battle

(A meeting of the Associates for Advancement.)

CHAIRMAN—This meeting has been called to do something about prices, hoarding——

Mr. Moil—Don't forget profiteering!

Mr. Wadd—Now wait! There's some confusion about that word.

Mrs. Blink—Well, I'm tired of everybody trying to make the consumer the goat. Who's hoarding meat? And look at meat prices!

Mr. Wadd—Another thing—there's all these wage demands!

Mr. Moil—Now that's a different matter——

Mr. Trumpet—The whole trouble is the Administration's weaseling on action.

Mr. Bray—You Republicans are talking out of two sides of your face. How many of you would vote for another OPA?

Mr. Dare—Mr. Chairman! As president of Atomic Age Citizens, Inc., I protest this passing of the buck—and the sacrifice—at home while men are dying in Korea. We need a program for sharing the battle.

Mrs. March—We need a big moral drive with lots of publicity. We should have pledge cards for consumers, retailers, manufacturers, workers to sign buttons and banners for them to display. We should marshal moral indignation—moral snobbery even—against all who hoard, raise prices, speculate, profiteer.

JUDGE PUDD—You can't do anything that way—or any other. It's just human nature to hoard, turn a penny at the chance——

Mr. Dare—I say it's ape nature! Are we still back in the jungle? Are we ready to give up on civilization?

Mrs. Blink—Mr. Chairman, I'm not defending hoarding or buying what you don't need. But a lot of buying now is because consumers see prices going up—and up, and so they rush to buy things they'd planned on getting later. We ought to get at the root of this, at whoever's raising prices.

Mr. Wadd—Now don't get the issue confused. Merchants are called profiteers simply because they pass on the higher prices they're charged.

Mr. Stepp—Then we'd better get at the manufacturers.

Mr. Vanderpuffer—As chairman of 18 boards, I want to say that the manufacturers are virtually going bankrupt—they have to pay so much for raw materials and labor.

Mr. Moil—Labor's not breaking even. Look at prices!

Mr. Stepp—And the farmers' income is down seven percent this year.

Mrs. McAddle—Why then does anybody work?

Mrs. Blink—But the money we pay—and pay, for groceries, clothes, everything—it surely must go somewhere.

Mr. Wadd—You're confusing the issue. It's just a matter of higher costs of production.

Mrs. March—The old run-around! I give up!

Mr. Dare—Now wait! Something surely can be done about the speculators.

Mr. Trumpet—That's just a political trick to give the President a chance to stick his nose into commodity trading.

Mr. Bray—A while ago you were complaining the Administration wasn't doing anything.

Mr. Vanderpuffer—The American people won't stand for rationing. At least it oughtn't to apply to meat. In the last war I had to go to Mexico to get a decent steak.

Chairman — Mr. Nesselrode Groove, our civic leader, has a suggestion.

Mr. Groove—We should watch and wait until after Labor Day.

Mrs. March—And prices get out of hand!

Judge Pudd—We're all too confused and hysterical. I understand scare buying has slowed down. Supply and demand will take care of everything.

Mrs. Blink—Especially the consumer's dollar.

Mr. Wadd—Mr. Chairman! I call that a subversive attack on the law of supply and demand.

Mr. Dare—When did it get in the Constitution?

Chairman—Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, our ace project woman, wants to speak.

Mrs. St. Vitus—I'm due this minute at my psychoanalyst's, but I do want to say that all this scare buying is simply caused by nerves. People are tense. They need to be relaxed. What we should do is to give a big cocktail party, say at Griffith Stadium, and have all the Senators and high Government officials come. I mean do it in a really big way! No one has ever given a REALLY big cocktail party in Washington.

Mr. Dare—And in view of the current craze for sugar, let's give each guest a lollipop as a souvenir!

Happy Accident

On August 3 you published a full page advertisement by one of our large department stores glorifying the one-room "efficiency" apartments that are being built in the District by the thousand.

Its purpose was to sell furniture and perhaps, incidentally, to help out builders who have over-built the market for these tiny dwellings which it describes as, "The blissful starting point of a new life for you Just Marrieds."

So the advertisement emphasizes "double-duty, space saving furniture." Then it goes into particulars: "Studios that open to sleep two," "chairs for overnight guests." One item is omitted, however, a low-slung trundle bed for use in case of a happy accident. WHY.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

A New Look At Tito

THE MINOR Soviet satellite state of Bulgaria is about as strong in ground froces as the United States, according to the most recent and most reliable intelligence estimates. This wholly unamusing commentary on the extent of American disarmament suggests one reason why Yugoslavia is now moving up toward first place in the official speculation on where the Kremlin is most likely to strike next.

An attack on Yugoslavia by the satellite Bulgarian, Hungarian, and Romanian armies has been considered on balance unlikely simply because it has been generally assumed that Marshal Tito's tough troops could rather easily deal with such an attack. Since Korea set the pattern, however, the military experts have been having a good hard look at this complacent assumption. And what they have found is anything but reassuring.

The Bulgarian ground forces consist of 10 fully manned and fully equipped divisions, including one armored division, or almost exactly the Korea day strength of the American ground forces. (It is true that satellite divisions are smaller, but it is also true that the American divisions on Korea day had been reduced to about 75 percent of full strength.) The Hungarians and Romanians have another 12 divisions between them, including another armored division, for a total of 23 divisions among the three satellites.

AGAIN for purposes of comparison, the entire ground strength available for the defense of western Europe now consists of 12 under-manned divisions (including two American) or hardly more than half the ground forces of the three eastern European satellites. These satellite armies, moreover, are equipped with between 700 and 800 of the T-34 Russian tanks which are now mauling the American forces in Korea, plus a smaller number of good German World War II models.

The three satellites also have adequate ground support aircraft, Yaks, Stormoviks, and other models generously supplied by their Russian masters. The Bulgarians, for example, have a 64,000-man air force, with 200 front-line planes, and the other satellites have comparable air strength.

On the other side, Marshal Tito can put into the field about 30 divisions. This number of divisions, larger than the total for the three neighboring satellites, explains the assumption that the satellites could not defeat Tito without direct intervention by the Red army. But especially since Korea, it has become obvious that Tito suffers from grave counterbalancing disadvantages.

One of these is suggested by the simple facts of geography. Yugoslavia is hemmed in by the three satellites in a giant arc, and the long Yugoslav frontier cannot possibly be defended at all points. Moreover, Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital and the only important industrial center, stands in an open plain, invitingly close to the satellite frontiers. With Belgrade lost, Tito would be reduced to fighting an indecisive guerilla war in the mountains.

YET EVEN graver is Tito's replacement problem. Like the other satellites, Tito's army is equipped, from pistols to tanks, with Russian arms, for which he can now get no replacements. The loss of a couple of spare parts, after all, can immobilize a tank or ground a plane, and the normal peacetime attrition rate has undoubtedly already reduced Tito's fighting strength. War would immensely accelerate this process, and while Tito was running out of everything, from tanks to ammunition, the satellites could draw on the inexhaustible Soviet reserves.

These are some of the reasons why reports that the satellite armies (especially the Bulgarian army), are moving up to the frontiers, are taken more seriously than ever before. Tito and his lieutenants still assure Western observers that they do not consider an attack imminent. Yet such assurances have an uncomfortably familiar sound, especially since Korea. And Tito himself has taken the precaution of canceling leaves and discharges.

In such circumstances, the logic of his situation will sooner or later force Tito to ask for armed aid from the West, simply because he cannot afford to grow constantly weaker while his potential enemies grow stronger. There are those who argue that arms aid for Tito would in itself impel the Kremlin to attack.

Yet if the revised estimates are correct, and the satellites have an excellent chance of defeating Tito's army, there can be only one reason for the Kremlin to hold back. That is the fear of a general war. A general war would, in fact, inevitably follow an attack on Yugoslavia, by the remorseless logic of events, unless the West were prepared to see a crumbling away of all powers of resistance on the Continent. The best way to avert an attack is thus to make it abundantly clear to the Kremlin that such an attack will be the point of no return. And the best way to do this is to let Tito have whatever he needs to discourage a satellite assault on Yugoslavia.

Light On Unpreparedness

ALTHOUGH expressed with great caution, the view of responsible officials in the Pentagon is that the race against time and space has been won. Reserves of men and arms have reached South Korea to prevent American troops fighting under the United Nations flag from being pushed off the peninsula.

Childs

The reason for the caution is plain enough. Too often-repeated reverses have made the communiques out of the war sound like something sirup, intended to lull the American public.

The long chain of reverses has produced an explosive reaction in this country. Not all the consequences of that reaction are now evident. The belief is growing that one consequence will be the repudiation of the party now in power at the polls this coming November.

Korea has touched off the ever louder cries, "Acheson must go" and "Johnson must go," with particular emphasis on the Secretary of Defense. If there is now to be a breathing spell while forces are built up for the drive to push the Communist invaders northward, this clamor is likely to grow louder.

It would be out of character with everything in President Truman's make-up if he were to drop the two principal members of his Cabinet while they were under fire. It would also be bad politics. It would be taken as a confession of failure. And not even Truman's bitterest enemies have accused him of being a poor politician.

BUT QUITE apart from any political gain or loss resulting from the Korean crisis, the average citizen wants to know why the sudden discovery that the Western world is virtually defenseless. He had been told by Secretary Johnson that this country was ready for any eventuality and by President Truman that peace was nearer than at any time in the past five years.

Because of his vainglorious talk Johnson is an easy scapegoat. Johnson is held up as the political opportunist, boasting about economies that would merely cut off the fat and leave the muscle. He is accused of deliberately undercutting the defense planning of his predecessor, James V. Forrestal. Forrestal appears as the noble patriot struggling against hopeless political odds to prepare his country for Communist aggression.

Fortunately for the citizen groping for knowledge, a document is in existence that bears directly on the whole question. It is the diary that Forrestal left behind when he took his own life in May, 1949.

Shortly before the nervous collapse that preceded his death, Forrestal took this diary to the White House and left it there for safekeeping. The document was put in the safe of Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, naval aide to the President. At the White House it is said that the diary was kept under seal unopened until it was turned over to Eugene S. Duffield, one of Forrestal's wartime associates, acting for the executor of his estate.

Clarence Dillon, of Dillon, Read & Co., the executor, has now returned to this country from Europe. It is reported that he with the members of the Forrestal family will shortly decide how and when the diary should be published.

In my opinion there is a strong public obligation to make it available, with proper editing, at the earliest possible date. We should learn more from it than from any other conceivable source.

Those who have read the diary say that it does throw extraordinary light on how we got where we are today. It is also the deeply moving record of a highly intelligent and sensitive individual who sees the pit of destruction prepared for his country; and yet, as though moving in a terrible and timeless nightmare, he can do nothing to avert disaster. This, too, we should face up to—the kind of ordeal to which a responsible public servant can be subjected.

In point of fact, the diary is not a connected day-to-day diary. Because it is more or less disjointed and lacking in chronology, it will take a great deal of editing. This editing should be done by someone like Douglas Southall Freeman, an historian of the highest stature and responsibility. There should be complete confidence that no interest nor any individual has been considered in the editing process.

For here is a voice that can speak above and beyond partisanship. In the broadest sense this is not alone a bequest to family and heirs. It is a bequest—a bequest of truth—to the American people. The things that Forrestal did not say during the last tragic year or two of his life, for what he believes to be good and sufficient reasons, he put down in this last despairing warning of the shape of things to come.

Department Store Sales Gained in June

Sales of Washington department stores in June were 2 percent greater than in 1949, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Sales in the first half of 1950 were 1 percent less than last year.

For the month department stores in the Fifth Reserve District showed an increase of 4 percent over last year but were unchanged for the half year.

Stocks of merchandise on June 30 were 8 percent greater locally but only 3 percent greater regionally. Outstanding orders as of that date were 7 percent higher here and 12 percent greater in the area, than a year previously.

The sales statistics were gathered from 95 stores but not all of them supplied information on the other categories.

CAPITAL AIRLINES: Operating profit of Capital Airlines for June amounted to $364,583, an increase of $104,396 over May, J. H. Carmichael, president of the company, announced yesterday. Net profit for June was $218,330 compared with $214,668 in May.

ODD LOTS: General Electric Co. announced yesterday a two-million dollar expansion program for its radio and television receiving tube plants in Owensboro, Ky. . . . Increasing sales of synthetic detergents and decreasing sales of soaps were repoted yesterday by the Association of American Soap & Glycerine Producers, Inc. . . . Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation will begin work immediately on its new 160,000 kilowatt steam-electric generating station on the west bank of the Hudson River at Albany.

BANK ASSETS: Assets of the seventeen District banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System aggregated $1,061,386,000 on July 26, according to a compilation by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. Demand deposits amounted to $811,654,000 and time deposits total $178,892,000.

EARNINGS: Celanese Corp. of America yesterday reported net income of $21,441,284, equal to $3.61 a share, for the first six months this year. This compared with $6,174,659 or 84 cents a share for the first half of 1949. Net earnings for the June quarter this year were $10,872,398 or $1.83 a share, compared with $127,038 or a deficit of 11 cents a common share, for the like quarter last year.

Illinois Cabinet Co. Bought by GE

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—The General Electric Co. announced today the purchase of the Illinois Caminet Co. at Rockford, Ill.

Dr. W. R. G. Baker, GE vice president and general manager of the electronics department, said the company had been a partial owner of the cabinet firm since 1947 and now has bought all the capital stock. Baker added that Oscar M. Lindgren, president and general manager of the Illinois Cabinet, will continue in that capacity.

Seaboard Finance Issue Offered at $23.25

The First Boston Corporation heads an underwriting group which is offering to the public a new issue of 114,000 shares of Seaboard Finance Company $1.35 convertible preferred stock, series B, stated value $23.25. The stock is priced at $23.25 per share.

This stock has been issued to the underwriters in exchange for a like number of outstanding $1.35 convertible preferred shares sold to them on June 8, as a standby transaction, pending registration of the series B preferred with the SEC. Proceeds of this sale were used by the company to acquire Employes Credit Corporation.

Failures Rise Slightly

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Business failures increased slightly to 168 in the week ended August 3 from 160 the previous week, and compared with 171 in the year-ago week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The credit reporting agency said there were seven more manufacturing failures, bringing the total to 40, while retailing failures increased 25 to 92 casualties.

31-Year-Old Desert Mermaid Swims Channel

Florence Chadwick Breaks Ederle's 1926 Record

By Robert Musel

DOVER, ENGLAND, Aug. 8 (U.P.)—A 31-year-old desert mermaid from California broke Gertrude Ederle's 24-year-old record for swimming the English Channel today, while a heartbroken, hysterical Shirley May France was dragged from the choppy waters in danger of drowning.

Florence Chadwick

In the race that began unannounced on the dark coast of Cap Gris Nez, France, after midnight Florence Chadwick, professional rough water swimmer from San Diego, stroked the 21 miles to Dover in 13 hours and 20 minutes. She cut an hour and 19 minutes off the record set by Miss Ederle in 1926.

Shirley May, dazed and weak, was pulled into her pilot boat as she floundered five miles from the English coast, in sight of the white cliffs of Dover. It was her second failure. Last September she was taken from the Channel six miles from shore, exhausted but screaming that she wanted to swim on.

It was a day of truimph and laughter for Miss Chadwick, who fulfilled a lifelong dream when she churned across the Channel faster than any woman in history. She was the 32d successful Channel swimmer and the 12th woman to make it.

MISS CHADWICK, who swam in her first meet when she was six years old, waded unheralded into the glassy waters of the channel at Cap Gris Nez at 2:40 a. m. (8:40 p. m. Monday EDT).

Shirley shoved off 30 minutes later at 3:12 a. m. and the race was on. But as the darkness gave way to dawn it became evident that the more experienced Miss Chadwick was pulling away from her young rival. Her lead stretched to one mile, then five miles.

Throughout the grueling day Miss Chadwick swam methodically, pausing only a few times to nibble on sugar. Shirley May trod water many times to eat, to complain, to sip a dextrose preparation and to shout gasping into a radio microphone.

The water was warm for the Channel, about 60 degrees Fahrenheit, but both swimmers ran into a strong adverse tide about five miles off the Dover Shore. Miss Chadwick, who had trained rigorously in the shark infested waters of the Persian Gulf, mastered it.

The coastal defense artillery held up its practice for two hours until the California woman swam out of target range. Then they let loose its big guns. The sea gulls set up a racaus cry, matched by the shouts of the spectators watching Miss Chadwick swimming in through St. Margaret's Bay.

FINALLY, SHE bumped into a rock and yelled, "land!" She staggered through jagged, moss-covered rocks and once she fell on a soft bed of seaweed.

"How comfy!" she said.

To the cheers of those on the beach, she had sprinted 100 yards before the finish.

"I feel all right and am quite prepared to swim right back," she joked. It was her second attempt, too. She tried two weeks ago, but gave up after 14 miles.

She first began to train for the channel swim in the Dharan, Saudi, Arabia, pool, where she was employed by the Arabian-American Oil Co. When she was transferred to Ras Al Mishab, on the gulf, she swam before and after work, and on her day off, remaining in the water from eight to 10 hours at a time.

At night she swam with a rope tied around her waist and anchored to shore so she wouldn't lose her way.

Covered with 20 pounds of white grease, Shirley May was serious and quiet when she set off on her attempt. She became ill after she had been out only a few hours, but she recovered.

A few minutes before noon her coach, Harry Boudakian, shouted to her to slow down, she was going too fast. She playfully splashed water on him.

AT 3:30 P. M. she appeared to be going strong. But an hour later she became nauseated. Boudakian called to her to quit. She refused.

"Then you must eat something," she said. "I can't, Harry, I can't," she replied. "You've got to," he yelled back. "You can't go on on an empty stomach." Finally she drank a white liquid, grinned and called to the flotilla of small boats around her.

Shirley May

Ten minutes later she was wallowing weakly in the water. The boats closed around her.

"Please, honey, you must come out," Boudakian plead. "No," she sobbed. Boudakian and Jose Antonio, Guatemalan swimmer, jumped in the channel and grabbed her. As soon as they touched her she was automatically disqualified.

Thus ended the misery and frustration for Shirley, the Fall River, Mass., school girl, who wanted to become the youngest person in history to swim the channel. She will be 18 this Friday.

She had been in the water 13 hours and 28 minutes, compared with 10 hours and 39 minutes last year.

Her eyes were red-rimmed and glazed. She was carried bodily into the East Cliff hotel where she was treated for shock and exhaustion. She cried continually and sobbed over and over, "I'm sorry." A Dover doctor said she will be all right in a few days.

And About the Horse

How It Became Hambletonian

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (NYHT).—The way John Hervey tells the story, it was May 5, 1849, and the scene was the farm of Jonas Seeley, outside the village of Sugar Loaf in Orange County, New York. On a knoll where three oak trees grew, the farmer and his hired man, William M. Rysdyk, stood studying the colt which Seeley's lame mare had just foaled. The colt was not many minutes old but he was already on his feet; he was a deep bay with a star and white hind feet.

"Mr. Seeley," Rysdyk said, "that's the best colt that ever was born in Orange County. I never saw anything like him before, and neither did anybody else."

Red Smith

Seeley's business was selling horses. Rysdyk couldn't bear the thought of that colt being sold away. So in October of 1849, the hired man scraped up $125, borrowing some of the money because his life savings were not that great, to buy the weanling and his dam from the farmer.

Seeley had bought the mare six years earlier for $135 and she had produced five foals for him. Her sire was Bellfounder, a Norwich trotter imported from England, and her dam was a one-eyed mare of uncommonly evil temper. Now Seeley's mare was 17 years old and incurably lame.

THE COLT'S SIRE was Abdallah, by the thoroughbred stallion Mambrino, out of a big trotting mare called Amazonia. Abdallah was the greatest sire of trotters of his generation, and perhaps the most unpopular one, heavy-headed, swaybacked, rat-tailed and so vile of disposition that he never was broken to harness.

When he was bred to Seeley's lame mare he was 25 years old and was standing on the farm of Ebenezer Seeley, Jonas' brother, at a stud fee of $10. Six years later, he was sold for $35 to a Long Island fish peddler who tried to put him in harness. Abdallah kicked the peddler's wagon to pieces, broke loose and ran wild all summer. He died in November of his thirty-first year, standing upright in a ruined shack on Gravesend Beach.

These were the antecedents of the little fellow that William Rysdyk led away from the Seeley farm 101 years ago. The mare and the colt and the man walked six miles to Rysdyk's home in Chester. Rysdyk called the colt Hambletonian.

THE COLT which Rysdyk put himself in hock to buy became the most tremendous sire the breed has known, the progenitor of the entire line of standardbreds. As the years passed, he and his sons virtually wiped out all other male lines. At least 95 percent of the animals that race this afternoon on Bill Cane's Good Time Track are lineal descendants of Rysdyk's colt.

Hambletonian himself didn't race much. He didn't race at all, formally, and as a consequence there is a legend that he was a bust in competition. The fact is that Rysdyk showed him regularly at the Grange County Fair and demonstrated his speed there, put him in several time trials and trotted him over the country roads for years, meeting all comers in informal brushes. His recorded trials suggest he was the fastest trotter of his time.

However, Rysdyk meant him as a sire and used him as such. When the colt was 2 years old and hadn't even been broken, he was bred to four mares, without charge. He started his professional stud career the following year at a fee of $25. When he was 5, the price went to $35; it rose to $75 when he was 14, to $100 the next year, $300 the next, and it was $500 from his seventeenth year until he was retired at 26.

At 15, Hambletonian was bred to 217 mares. At 16, he had 193 matings. When Rysdyk died, two years before the horse's death, it was estimated that Hambletonian had earned $200,000 in fees. The estimate seems conservative. In his lifetime the horse was bred 1908 times at prices which, if they were all paid in full, would have brought $297,600. He got 1331 foals.

WELL, that's why the race up in Goshen today is called the Hambletonian instead of the Good Time Derby or the Goshen Classic, or the Bill Cane Trot. Sportswriters, may heaven forgive them, loved to call it the Corn Tassel Derby, this being considered an extraordinarily witty way of identifying it as an amusing pastime of rural comics.

This quality of wit is not deeply appreciated in Goshen, or so one gathers from a letter from Miss Elizabeth Shartz, who occupies the office of Goshen's town historian.

"Metropolitan sportswriters," she observes, "usually refer to Goshen as a sleepy little town, but underneath its surface tranquility there lies a vibrant love for harness racing that never slumbers. Goshen is proud of its antiquity and of its horse heritage. It combines the old with the new.

Phils Whip Bums, 6-5; 15 For Roberts

Brooklyn, Aug. 8 (AP).—Robin Roberts gained his fifteenth triumph tonight as he pitched the Philadelphia Phils to a 6-5 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The win increased the Phils' first place lead to five games over the Boston Braves who were beaten by the New York Giants, 2-1. Roberts needed help in the ninth from Jim Konstanty.

The Brooks almost pulled the game out of the fire in the ninth, but Konstanty retired two pinch hitters on groundouts with the tying run in scoring position.

When Roberts yielded a single to Gil Hodges with one out in the ninth, he was replaced by Konstanty. Konstanty was nicked for a double by Roy Campanella, Hodges stopping at third. Pinch hitter Jim Russell then grounded to Mike Goliat, Hodges scoring and pinch runner Eddie Miksis moving to third. Pinch hitter Tommy Brown grounded to Goliat for the final out.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Lefty Curt Simmons, a 14-game winner, rejoined the league-leading Philadelphia Phillies today after return of his National Guard unit from camp.

Simmons' Pennsylvania National Guard Division has been ordered to active duty. No date has been set for reporting but it probably will be sometime within 30 days.

Cards Win, Bucs Lose 10th In Row, Kiner Homers

Pittsburgh, Aug. 8 (AP).—Despite Ralph Kiner's 30th home run of the year and another by Clyde McCulloug, the Pittsburgh Pirates lost their 10th game in a row tonight to the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-4. The loss set a losing streak record for the league this season, McCullough's homer gave the Bucs their first score in 33 innings.

Big Ten to Televise Games in Theaters

Chicago, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Big Ten announced today that it will televise football games this fall to theaters where admission will be charged the public.

Illinois and Northwestern will theater-televise their games in three theaters in Chicago. In Detroit, Michigan games will be screened in one theater of United Detroit Theaters, Inc.

The four theaters included in the program thus far average slightly less than 4000 seats.

Mickey Haefner Goes To Braves on Waivers

Boston, Aug. 8 (AP).—The acquisition of Lefthander Mickey Haefner from the Chicago White Sox via the waiver route was announced tonight by the Boston Braves.

Haefner, a 37-year-old knuckleball artist, served six terms as a starting pitcher for the Washington Senators, was sold to the White Sox late last season. So far this year he has a 1-6 record, mostly as a relief pitcher.

Giants Click For 8th in Row

Boston, Aug. 8 (AP).—Wes Westrum's one-on homer extended the New York Giants' winning streak to eight straight and 17 victories in their last 18 tonight when his forces topped the Boston Braves, 2-1, at the expense of Lefty Warren Spahn. Sheldon Jones turned back the Tribesmen with four hits, including Bob Elliott's eighteenth homer of the season.

Justice Turns Down Redskins To Play for Richmond Rebels

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Charlie Justice has changed his mind and will play professional football after all—but not for the Washington Redskins.

North Carolina's two-time All-America is expected to sign a contract with the minor league Richmond Rebels this weekend in Chicago. He's there as a member of the College All-Stars, who meet the Philadelphia Eagles in Soldier Field Friday night.

Justice

With Justice in Chicago is Harry Seibold, owner of the Richmond team, who will pay the brilliant 24-year-old star $10,000 to play six home games. Justice will not play in games away from Richmond.

In addition, Justice will be able to keep his $6000 job with the North Carolina Medical Foundation, at Raleigh, as his Richmond contract requires him to practice only on Saturdays.

Drafted by the Redskins last January, Justice has wanted to play pro ball all along, but he was hesitant about giving up his lifetime job with the Medical Foundation.

Had he joined the Redskins, he would have been required to

Irv Noren, Vernon Mar No-Hitter Bid

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—Lefty Lou Brissie made short work of the Nats, shutting them out on a two-hitter, 5-0, for the last place Philadelphia Athletics tonight before only 1190 fans.

Working fast, he wound up the game in only an hour and 43 minutes.

Singles by Mickey Vernon and Irv Noren deprived Brissie of a no hitter and with any kind of luck, the 6-foot, 4-inch war hero would have gained access to the hall of fame.

Vernon's hit with two outs in the seventh, was a soft roller, just beyong the grasp of Brissie and then Bill Hitchcock, the second baseman. It then rolled into center.

Noren's was a bunt down the third base line which Brissie, third baseman Kermit Wahl, and Catcher Joe Astroth let go in vain hope that it would roll foul.

Fast-balling Brissie walked only three and faced only 31 batters. The Nats moved two runners to third, but Brissie, who shrugged off 24 leg operations to save a wounded leg incurred during the war, grimly pitched his way out of trouble each time tonight.

Victim of Brissie's magnificient performance was big Sid Hudson, who for five innings, had a shutout going for him, too.

It was Brissie's sixth victory this year and his third over Washington. His latest effort was an improvement over his previous triumph against the Nats when he shut them out on a three-hitter a month ago.

Those two shutouts are the only ones he's pitched in his four-year professional career.

In the first 6 1/3 innings, Brissie faced only 19 Nats, par for the course. He walked Vernon in the second inning, but Mickey was

Griff Gives In, Puts Up National Scoreboard

At last the National League has been officially recognized by Clark Griffith, who led the bitter revolt 50 years ago resulting in the formation of the American League.

The Nats' president is putting up an extra scoreboard in right field to post the progress of games in the National League for the first time. The new board will be ready before the season is over.

Zarilla Has Homer, 2 Singles

Bosox Stop Yanks, 7-4; 9th Victory for Parnell

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Al Zarilla batted in three runs with a home run and two singles to lead the Boston Red Sox to a 7-4 triumph over the New York Yankees tonight.

Mel Parnell went all the way for his ninth victory before a turnout of 58,771 fans. The loss dropped the Yankees into second place tie with the idle Cleveland Indians.

Parnell held the Yanks to eight hits, one of them a homer by Yogi Berra.

The Red Sox outfielders led a 13-hit assault on four New York pitchers, the garden trio collecting seven safeties. Dom Di Maggio and Zarilla each had three. Zarilla and Billy Goodman belted two-run homers, Zarilla's coming in the fifth inning when Boston scored three times to break a 2-2 tie.

The loss was the Yankees' fifth in their past seven games and left them with exactly the same won-lost figures as the Indians, 62-40, for a percentage of .608.

13 Trotters Face Gate in 25th Classic

By John Chandler

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—Thirteen smart-stepping trotters, cream of the 3-year-old crop, are scheduled to start tomorrow in the $75,209 Hambletonian—richest in the event's history.

First money is $40,537.

Sleepy Goshen was slowly waking up as the vanguard of a crowd of 21,000 began moving in, the names of Star's Pride, Florican and Lusty Song were foremost with those who had the pari-mutuel windows in mind.

Hambletonian Line-up:

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—The field for the twenty-fifth Hambletonian will be raced tomorrow at Good Time Park, with post positions, drivers and probable odds:

P.P.	Horse	Driver	Probable Odds
1	Darn Flashy (Al Winger)		12-1
2	Vic Song (Wendell Wathen)		8-1
3	Lord Steward (Guy Crippen)		5-1
4	Anjheny Hanover (Gib White)		20-1
5	aMariner Hanover (Sam Caton)		15-1
6	Choice Hanover (Fay Funderburk)		20-1
7	Lusty Song (Del Miller)		3-1
8	King's Ranson (Tom Berry)		6-1
9	*Mighty Express (Del Cameron)		25-1
10	*Banter Hanover (Ernie Roediger)		25-1
11	aStuart Hanover (Joe O'Brien)		15-1
12	bFlorican (Harry Pownall)		2-1
13	bStar's Pride (John Simpson)		2-1

aSam Caton Stable entry.
bHarry Pownall Stable entry.
*Field.

Heats—One mile. First heat 2 p.m. (EST).
Gross purse, $75,209.12.
Breeders' award, $1,504.18.

Star's Pride is expected to rule the 2-to-1 betting choice. The bay son of Worthy Boy is owned by E. R. Harriman of Arden, N. Y., and L. B. Sheppard, Hanover, Pa. He will be driven by Johnny Simpson.

Florican, owned by Harriman and his nephew, E. T. Gerry, will be driven by Harry Pownall, and will be coupled in the wagering with Star's Pride. Pownall won the 1945 Hambletonian with Titan Hanover, owned by Harriman's Arden Homestead Stable.

Lusty Song, from the Hayes Fair Acres Stable, Du Quoin, Ill., is listed at 3 to 1.

Third choice of the odds-makers at 5 to 1 is Lord Steward, from the stable of Ralph H. Kroening, Milwaukee. Guy Crippen will drive—his first crack at the Hambletonian.

Beats Chumming, 76-4

Fishermen Discover Trolling Gets Best Chesapeake Results

By Ralph Murdock

THE BIG QUERY in fishing at the present time is—does chumming beat trolling?

Murdock

Like everything else, you live and learn. For Sunday's angling trip we employed every conceivable method (except politics) to secure a couple of gallons of grass shrimp. Much to our surprise, when we arrived at the dock, our guide, Doyle Kendall, pointed to the much sought after bait in the ice box. Everyone seemed happy but one angler—Bob Lusby, who manufactures trolling lures.

As we headed out of Deale's for the bay, Art Brown popped up with, "We can't miss today, fellas. We've got the right bait. Just two weeks ago we chummed up 148 strippers at Eastern Bay."

The rotund Lusby, who had never stooped so low as to chum for fish, countered, "Art, I'll bet you a good cigar that we can catch more fish by trolling. How about trying both methods?"

Brown, a man of a few thousand words, replied, "OK."

AND SO-O-O-O-O, the contest was on. A small batch of gulls diving into the water just ahead of our boat made trolling our first venture.

It took us almost an hour to catch a dozen pansize rockfish by this method. After a few more circles Art suggested a chum line. Even Lusby voiced his approval, so we rigged our lines for the next process-chumming.

One speckled trout, a black sea bass, a striper, and an eel convinced us that we were in the wrong type of business. The score at this time was, trolling 12, chumming 4, with Lusby eight lengths in front.

"Dagwood' sandwiches with six different types of meat and cheese between fresh hard rolls, was next in order. At this juncture, Dr. Herbert Brandes, the smallest angler on board, took the lead in the "sandwich league." The medico was ahead by two "Dagwoods" at the finish.

The rest of the trip was devoted to trolling. Here's the final count—60 rockfish, 15 bluefish, (about a pound each) and one big flounder by trolling. Four miscellaneous fish by chumming—as stated above.

All of the rockfish were taken with the No. 3 Lusby all-white polar bear hair lures while the same sized yellow heads with white hair seemed to entice the blue fish. This catch was made near the mouth of Herring Bay.

D. C. Printers Win Over Chicago, 4-1

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Washington, D. C. Union Printers won their second straight game in defense of their Printers International baseball championship today, downing Chicago 4-1.

Two other teams also stayed unbeaten in the tourney, a double elimination affair.

St. Louis remained in the category by whipping St. Paul, 6-5 and New York rolled over Baltimore, 19-4.

Pitcher Harry Wolfe held Chicago to four hits as his mates pounded out 11 hits for their victory.

Al Bushling's triple and a single drove in one Washington run in the third. Two singles added another in the fifth frame.

Cincinnati and Detroit were eliminated from the tourney by absorbing their second defeats. Cincinnati lost to Boston, 1-34, and Detroit lost to Indianapolis, 8-7, in 12 innings.

Tomorrow's pairings: Chicago vs. Baltimore, Indianapolis vs. Boston, Washington vs. New York, Pittsburgh vs. St. Louis.

Castro Gets Three Hits, One a Homer

The league-leading Heurich Brewers dropped Randall Motors out of contention for the second half title of The Post Industrial League, winning, 9 to 3, yesterday on the South Ellipse.

Jack Castro, with a home run and two singles in five trips to the plate, led the Brewers' attack. Castro also batted in four runs.

Heurich now has won eight and lost one in the second half. Today on the Ellipse second-place Cameo (6-2) plays Sunnybrook (4-5).

Faulty Movies Give Reprieve To 4 Redskins

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 7.—Because of a faulty motion-picture camera, three or four Washington Redskins football players will continue as nonpaying guests of the National League team a little longer than expected.

Today was the day Coach Herman Ball expected to view the cinema results of last Saturday's savage scrimmage.

After the movie Ball was expected to retire for a conference with President George Marshall and the coaching staff and chop the roster down a little.

But when the camera revealed nothing more than a jumbled mass of black and white, Coach Ball decided to withhold the axe until Saturday.

Midgets, Giants Team at Turner's

Two midgets and two behemoths will see action in a team bout at Turner's Arena tonight on the weekly grappling show.

One team will consist of Tiny Mills, 260-pound, 6-foot-4-inches, and Sky Low Low, 44 inches tall and 89 pounds. Opposing will be Ace Freeman, 198 pounds and 6-foot-1-inch, and Pee Wee James, 44 inches and 90 pounds.

In other bouts Roland Meeker meets Red (Rosy) Ryan, Ted Tourtas goes against Stu Hart and Lew Newman tackles Harry Finkelstein.

'Last Welterweight Fight'

Sugar Ray Robinson Defends Title Against Fusari Tonight

By Jack Hand

Jersey City, Aug. 8 (AP).—Ray Robinson risks his welterweight title for the last time tomorrow night (9 p. m. EST) in Roosevelt Stadium against Charlie Fusari in a Damon Runyon cancer fund show.

"Win, lose or draw, this is my last welterweight defense," said Sugar Ray at his Pompton Lakes, N. J. camp today.

Robinson didn't elaborate but it was obvious that the struggle to make the 147-pound limit is taking too much out of him.

What Sugar Ray has in mind is a shot at Jake LaMotta's middleweight crown. But that may be a distant proposition. No promoter has been able to get the two to agree on terms and the International Boxing Club has Jake under exclusive contract.

In the meantime, Robinson fights a double-header tomorrow against (1) the scales and (2) Fusari, a blond 25-year-old puncher from Irvington, N. J., and he's doing it for less than taxi fare.

The lean Harlem slasher will fight for the sum of one dollar. Ray donates his 30 percent purse to the fund which may realize about $50,000 if 30,000 fans pay $150,000 as expected.

No TV, Radio Broadcast

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 8.—There will be no broadcast or telecast of tonight's welterweight championship fight between Sugar Ray Robinson and Charley Fusari.

LeRoy McGuirk Fights to Save Remaining Eye

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—LeRoy McGuirk, National Wrestling Association junior heavyweight champion, was in the Johns Hopkins Hospital tonight fighting to save the sight in his lone remaining eye.

McGuirk, a national collegiate champion in his college days at Oklahoma A. and M., lost his right eye in a swimming accident as a boy.

Six months ago he was in an automobile accident near Little Rock, Ark., and his left eye was badly injured. Doctors wanted to remove it then but McGuirk said no, that he wanted some hope, however slim, of some day seeing again.

Doctors all over the country have examined McGuirk's eye. Tomorrow he will get an answer from specialists here.

"All I want to hear them say is that I have a chance," he said.

wiped out on Sam Mele's double play grounder.

Cass Michaels, second up in the sixth, became the Nats' second base runner when he drew a walk after Noren had forced Michaels at second, Vernon broke the spell with his hit, sending Noren to third. Mele, however, left Noren there with a fly to Barney McCosky.

In the eighth, Bob Ortiz led off for Washington with a walk and Gil Coan, running for him, stole second. Sam Dente pushed him to third with a sacrifice but Evans and Hudson couldn't nudge the ball past the infield.

A walk to McCosky, Paul Lehner's single and Sam Chapman's fly to left produced the A's first run in the sixth.

And they wrapped it up with four more in the eighth on a walk to Eddie Joost, singles by McCosky and Lehner, a walk to Sam Chapman, an infield out, an outfield fly and Kermit Wahl's two-bagger.

Mrs. Huseman Ties Mrs. Kuster at Bethesda

Mrs. Ken Kuster and Mrs. Frank Huseman tied for first place with net 33½ each in the best nine-hole tournament at Bethesda Country Club yesterday. Mrs. A. B. Whiting and Mrs. Ray Gaillard tied for third, each with a net 34½. Mrs. Ernest Sandford of Argyle won the guest prize with 53—18—35.

Justice Turns Down Redskins To Play for Richmond Rebels

obtain a leave of absence, but Foundation officials were not willing to grant him leave.

He told Redskin officials when they drafted him last winter "they were wasting a draft choice," but the Redskins made him their 17th choice nevertheless. In April, he came to Washington to discuss the situation with Coach Herman Ball, of the Redskins, and upon his return to Chapel Hill, N. C., said he would not play pro football

Seibold and his Richmond coach, former Chicago Bears quarterback Keith Molesworth, made several trips to Chapel Hill to see if they could get the 170-pound triple-threat star to change his mind. Only when William Carmichael, acting president of North Carolina University and Justice's close adviser, was convinced that Justice could keep his Foundation job and play with Richmond, did he advise the star to accept the Richmond proposition.

First indication that Justice, who said he feared getting hurt in pro ball, had changed his mind came three weeks ago when he accepted an invitation to play with the College All-Stars. Earlier, he turned down the bid, saying his football playing days were over.

Wills' 1-Hitter Tops Playoff

Don Wills, 12 years old, paid tribute to Walter Johnson yesterday at Griffith Stadium by pitching Parkside Midgets to a one-sided 12-0 victory over the Banneker Hornets in a play-off game in the Johnson Memorial League.

Wills gave up only one hit which came in the fourth inning by the Hornet's pitcher, Carlton Davis. Wills began playing in the Johnson leagues when he was 7; this is his fifth year and he is pitching in his third championship series.

In the 13-14 year group, Langston collected seven hits off three Police Boys Club No. 2 pitchers to gain a 15-12 triumph.

The same opponents will meet tomorrow at the Stadium, the Midgets at 2 and 4 p. m.

Kid Pitchers Have Big Day

It was a big day for the pitchers yesterday in the playoffss of the Walter Johnson junior baseball league at Griffith Stadium.

Bob Payne of the 12-and-under Rosedale team of the International League pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Taft of the American Association. He got three hits, a single, a double, and a triple, and batted in six runs to lead Rosedale to a 11-0 win.

In the 14-under Major league playoff, Taft of the American League defeated Rosedale of the National League, 9-3, as Leo Mascetti pitched a four-hit game.

Mascetti hit two triples and a double for a perfect day and struck out eleven. The second games of the best two-out-of-three series will resume today at Griffith Stadium.

Locke, Mangrum Tie at 282 in Tam O'Shanter, Play for Title Today

Both Fire 67s; Douglas Third at 283

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Exiled from American fairways for more than a year under a PGA ban, Bobby Locke returned with a vengeance today to sweep into a 72-hole tie with Lloyd Mangrum for the Tam O'Shanter All-American golf title.

They both closed their fourth round with 67s for 6-under-par scores of 282, forcing them into an 18 hole playoff tomorrow. A first prize of $2500 is at stake.

It was Locke's rusty blade putter, which looks like a throwback from the caveman days, which once again proved the fatal weapon. The South African, fresh from winning the British Open, birdied four of the last five with putts of 32, 12, 30, and 22 feet.

This closing drive, one of the greatest in the 10-year history of the colorful Tam O'Shanter, gave him a five-under 31 on the back nine to couple with his front side of 36.

Locke was banned by the PGA last year when he failed to fulfill a contract to appear at the Toledo Inverness Invitational.

The boom was lifted on him this April by the PGA and "Old Muffin Face"—now sporting a cookie duster under his nose—made the Tam meet his first on his return to the United States.

Mangrum was an early starter today and blazed in with a 31—with birdie putts from 9 to 15 feet—and 36 for his 67.

Locke was playing with Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., who finished with birdie 3 for a 70 for 283 and third place worth $1250.

In a tie for fourth place, each pocketing $750, were leading money winners Sam Snead and Jim Ferrier. Snead closed with a 69 for 285 while Ferrier blasted 68.

Final scores and winnings:

Bobby Locke and Lloyd Mangrum tied for first at 282 and will play off tomorrow at 18 holes for $2500 first prize. Second prize is $1750.

Kreuzberg's Net 68 Wins Post Cup Golf

Mrs. Richard Kreuzberg of Kenwood Golf and Country Club won The Washington Post Cup yesterday at Congressional Country Club by posting a three-over-par 76, which combined with her eight handicap, gave her a net 68.

A field of 97 golfers played in the Women's District Golf Association class A tournament, the largest to compete in any tournament this year.

Mrs. Kreuzberg started badly, going out in a five-over-par 41. Then she rallied sharply, carding five pars, one bogey, and birdies on 15, 17, and 18, to return in a two-under-par 35.

Mrs. Hugh Nicolson of Chevy Chase won low gross with 75. Mrs. Frank Williams of Manor, 83—11—72, took second net. Other winners include:

Mrs. Nicolson, five-time District Women's amateur champion, went out in one-over-par 37. She birdied two and four, but bogied one, six and seven. Returning, she had another one over par, a 36, bogeying seventeen and eighteen, after a birdie on ten. All her other holes were parred. Her two handicap made her net score an even par 73.

Third low net—Miss Joan Crampton, Congressional, 86, 13—73.
Fourth low net—Mrs. John Mancos, Belle Haven, 85, 11—74.*
Fifth low net—Mrs. Raleigh Handrix, Belle Haven, 84, 10—74.*
Sixth low net—Mrs. E. V. Brumfiel, Congressional, 86, 12—74.*
Seventh low net—Mrs. G. H. Bailey, Washington, 82, 7—75.*
Eighth low net—Miss Ann Reh, Washington, 88, 13—75.*
Ninth low net—Mrs. E. C. Atwood, Kenwood, 89, 14—75.*
Tenth low net—Mrs. LaFayette Franklin, Washington, 89, 13—76.
*Tie resolved by card match.

Mrs. McPherson Wins Low Net at Manor

Mrs. D. M. McPherson, 95—23—72, won the Ladies' Day 18-hole handicap tournament at Manor Country Club yesterday. Mrs. Al Loda and Mrs. Tom Wilder tied for second with net 73s. Mrs. Isabel McCartee of Columbia won the guest prize with 96—16—80, and Mrs. Augusta Thompson, 42—15—27, won the inside nine tournament.

Wehrle Picks Up

Stranahan Wins Amateur In Playoff

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Defending Champion Frank Stranahan, already ahead by five strokes, won by a technical disqualification today over troubled Wilford Wehrie on the eighteenth green of their playoff for the All-American amateur golf title.

No card was turned in for Wehrle, who picked up on the last green when Stranahan sank a 15-footer. Arch Matson, tourney rules chairman, said the pick-up automatically disqualified Wehrle.

Wehrle had started the playoff after a charge today by the USGA in New York that he has lacked amateur status for the past two years.

Stranahan unreeled a four-under-par 68, compared with a theoretical 73 for Wehrle. The two had tied in the regulation 72-hole distance over Tam O'Shanter's par 36, 36—72 course at 291 strokes yesterday.

After losing to Stranahan, Wehrle said he thoughtlessly picked up with a six-foot putt to make.

"When Stranahan made that 15-footer, I just naturally assumed it was a waste of time to putt," Wehrle said. "I never thought there would be a technicality involved. I am naturally very sorry about that."

Wehrle, whose amateur standing was canceled by the USGA in 1948 for lending his name to advertise a golf club, clinched it for Stranahan by missing the sixteenth green for a one-over-par four.

The cards:

Par out	453	444	435	—36
Stranahan out	443	444	444	—35
Wehrle out	453	445	444	—37
Par in	534	445	344	—36—72
Stranahan in	434	444	343	—33—68
Wehrle in	534	445	439

?(Wehrle picks up on eighteenth to disqualify himself).

The USGA statement today told Tam Promoter George S. May that Wehrle is not an amateur. But Wehrle teed off in the playoff with the comment that he intends soon to apply for reinstatement as an amateur.

Brownell Leads With 140, But Passes Amateur

Baltimore, Aug. 8 (AP).—Bobby Brownell, a 31-year-old Washington insurance agent, shot a pair of 70s today to lead the field by 6 strokes in the Baltimore-Washington area national amateur golf championship qualifier at the Woodholme Country Club.

But Brownell is not going to play in the national. He said he will not be able to make the trip to Minneapolis to compete in the August 21-26 event.

So the next four finishers were given the places alloted this area. They were:

Ed Finnessy, Baltimore, 74, 72—146.

Paul Haviland, Baltimore, 75, 72—147.

Dr. Walter Panowski, Baltimore, 76,72—148.

Karl Kellerman, Columbia Country Club, Washington, 74, 75—149.

Brownell, who has played in five national amateurs and has qualified for eight, had but one 3-putt hole of the 36. His 140 total was 6 under par.

Other scores:
Charlie Price, Kenwood, 80 76—156.
B. E. Skinker, Columbia, 76 83—159.
E. F. Brunner, Baltimore Country Club, 78 78—156.
Ralph Bogart, Chevy Chase, 75 76—151 (declined alternate place in national).

Bolster Leads Junior Golfers

Quantico, Va., Aug. 8.—Denny Bolster, Middle Atlantic junior golf champion, shot an even par 72 here today to win a junior tournament sponsored by the Quantico Officer's Club for junior golfers in the Washington area. Thirty-seven Washington area youngsters competed. The results:

Brother, Sister Share Honors

East Potomac public golf course's elimination tournament in the city-wide publinx junior tournament turned into pretty much of a family affair yesterday as two brother-sister teams qualified.

Ann Williams, 16, Washington-Lee High student, and her brother John, 16, carded the low scores of the day among the former members of the free publinx clinics. Ann had a 53 for nine holes and John had 36 for the same distance.

Eileen Myers, 10-year-old District AAU juvenile swimming champ, qualified with a 61, and her brother Danny tallied a 49. Qualifiers from all the public links include:

EAST POTOMAC BOYS (14-17)—John Williams, 36; Mark Spies, 39; Buddy Watwood, 43; Tommy Teal, 44; Fred Smeltzer, 45. Anacostia—Jimmy Smith, 94, 18 holes; Buddy Ison, 97, 18 holes. Fort Dupont—Vernon Worsley, 54; Arthur Douglas, 54; Joseph Brannon, 62.

EAST POTOMAC BOYS (10-13)—Robin Shlert, 37; Bruce Kessler, Jr., 38; Dale Livermore, 45; Joe Mayhall, 46; Jerry Webber, 46; Danny Myers, 49. Hugh Erskine, 50. Anacostia—Jimmy McQuire, 47; John McQuire, 48. Fort Dupont—Bobby Richey, 64; Walter Beadley, 68; James Baer, 68.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

Shift of CAA to Defense With Portion of Its Staff In Military is Expected

The Civil Aeronautics Administration probably will be transferred to the Defense Department and part of its 17,000-man civilian staff militarized, it was learned yesterday.

Defense and CAA officials are reported to be agreeable to the general idea for the duration of the war. The transfer plan, however, is opposed by some other Federal officials.

A top Federal official yesterday said the odds definitely were in favor of the transfer. The final decision. he said, is up to the President, who will be given a report and recommendation on the problem in a few days.

In the meantime, he revealed, a committee is drawing up plans on how CAA would fit into Defense; how many CAA employes would be asked to join the military service and at what ranks, and how CAA and Air Force operations could be coordinated.

A counterproposal would continue CAA in the Commerce Department with reserve status, subject to direction of its military functions by the Defense Department. Some CAA officials and employes would be inducted into the military and be reassigned to their present jobs under this suggestion, which is criticized as a "half-measure" by the all-out transfer advocates.

During World War II several faint moves were made toward the transfer of CAA to the Army for the duration. The first concrete suggestion along the transfer line was made two years ago by the Congressional Aviation Policy Committee. The committee recommended that CAA's Federal airways be transferred to Defense during wartime.

Shortly after the Korean war broke out, a study was begun on the part CAA was to play in this Nation's defense. The proposal for an outright transfer of CAA to Defense for the duration evolved during these discussions. The White House and Budget Bureau staff is now studying the question.

It is agreed that CAA's navigation, plane identification, traffic control, and other such activities are essential to national defense. During World War II, some people feel, the Army raided CAA's staff and duplicated many of its facilities.

These same people argue that CAA could remain intact and do both its war and civilian jobs if the agency were transferred to Defense, and at a far smaller overall cost.

Militarization also would stabilize CAA's staff. Besides its officials and experts, control tower operators and other operational employes would be blanketed into the military and be reassigned to their present jobs.

In addition, CAA would escape a budget and personnel cut under the riders adopted to the general budget bill. The Byrd-Bridges rider exempts military agencies.

COAST GUARD: Another agency slated for transfer to the military for the duration is the Coast Guard. This agency, now in the Treasury Department, will be switched to the Navy Department..

Coast Guard operated within Navy during World War II and its law allows it to be transferred during a war.

RETIREMENT: The Senate yesterday passed a bill to benefit Federal workers who retired between April 1, 1948, and September 30, 1949, and who took a 10 percent deduction in their annuities to provide benefits for their wives. The bill cuts the retirement deduction to 5 percent.

POST OFFICE: The Senate quickly passed over two bills to order the Postmaster General to call off his economy program.

AGRICULTURE: A bill to give Agriculture two additional assistant secretaries and an assistant secretary for administration has been snagged in the House. An objection by Representative H. Carl Andersen (R., Minn.) knocked out the assistant secretary for administration—a job most other departments have—and other protests side-tracked the entire bill.

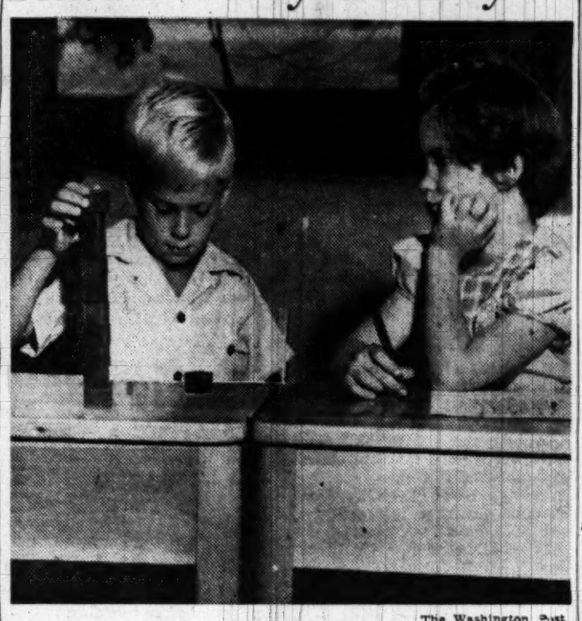
Arlington School Candidates Tested With Toys and Crayon



The Washington Post

MAKING THE GRADE—Howard Hayes, 5, of 2113 North 18th st., builds and counts blocks as Barbara Ann Murphey, 5, of 3612 North Dickerson st., awaits her turn during a testing session at Matthew Maury School yesterday. About 750 Arlington County children have taken the test to determine whether 5-year-olds are mature enough to benefit by regular school classes

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

About 750 Arlington 5-year-olds have been playing with blocks, toy autos, and crayons this summer—to test their readiness for public school September 5.

These "play" sessions are conducted under the eyes of school psychologists to determine whether the youngsters are mature enough for school. They all reach the age of six sometime between September 30 and next March 1.

Children who will be six before September 30 will be admitted without question.

The maturity tests, to check social, emotional, and mental development, are new this year in Arlington. They are being conducted by school psychologist Mrs. Miriam Speck, with the help of six George Washington University graduate psychologists and two other members of the school.

Youngsters start off a testing session in groups of eight, with a plentiful supply of crayons and paper.

The artistic end result of their "spontaneous" drawing doesn't matter much. But it gives a fine opportunity to check the child's group behavior, his ability to follow directions, and his visual-motor coordination, according to Miss Speck.

Later, in individual interviews, the five-year-olds switch to blocks and bead stringing. Their handling of these materials, part of standard general apitude tests, helps show ability with number concepts, memory, and form discrimination.

Mrs. Speck stresses, though, that the aptitude tests are "just one small part of the picture."

Given equal consideration are a report from the parents on the child's general development and the interviewer's general observations on the child's behavior.

About 20 percent of the children who took the tests will not be recommended for school entrance, Mrs. Speck says.

Among those who have been asked to wait another year before starting school, is one "very bright" child, with a mental age of seven. Because the child was emotionally immature, his parents agreed he would be better off at home, according to Mrs. Speck.

Most parents have been "very cooperative" about accepting recommendations, she says. Only 10 have insisted on enrolling their youngsters against the psychologist's advice.

Thief Loots Apartments In Fairfax

The "daylight burglar" who has plagued apartment dwellers in Alexandria and Arlington in recent weeks apparently has switched his attentions to Fairfax County.

County Police Sergt. Joseph Howard said yesterday police have learned of at least 15 burglaries in the Belleview Apartment area, just south of Alexandria. Loot totaling $250 in cash, as well as miscellaneous jewelry as yet unappraised, was taken Monday, Howard said, and police expect additional burglary reports with the return of vacationing residents.

Howard said the reports began to come in to police headquarters around 5 p. m. Monday as residents of the apartments arrived home from work to learn their homes had been looted. Besides the dozen complaints reported to police, detectives found several other apartments had been entered apparently while occupants were on vacation, according to Howard.

In all cases, the sergeant said, doors had been forced open with the use of a heavy-duty screw driver or some other implement. In most apartments, the thief or thieves took the contents of children's banks, but in one home, $120 in cash was stolen.

Several complainants reported loss of jewelry and one said a .25-caliber automatic pistol had been taken.

Howard reported police believe the culprit is the same who has victimized Arlington and Alexandria homes despite a difference in the "modus operandi." In the earlier burglaries, the thief represented himself as a salesman or magazine solicitor while approaching apartments to determine whether they were occupied.

Wages Hit New High

Wage and salary payments hit a new all-time peak in June, an annual rate of $141,800,000,000, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

For Remodeling

Senate Faced With Moving On Weekend

The Senate may move this weekend for the second year in a row, into temporary quarters in the old Supreme Court Room in the Capitol.

Purpose of the move would be to clear the Senate chamber for the second half of a remodeling job. Last year a new roof was put on. This year's work calls for redecorating the chamber.

The move was recommended yesterday by the Senate's five-member committee in charge of the remodeling.

After Chairman Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) presented the report, Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) said it would be taken up today by the Democratic Policy Committee. Minority Floor Leader Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.) indicated the Republicans would go along with the move.

A similar move by the House is to be discussed at 10 a. m. by its committee on remodeling the chamber, Chairman James W. Trimble (D., Ark.) announced.

House leaders are reported loath to make the move. Last year the House operated in its big Ways and Means Committee room while the new House roof and ceilings were being installed.

Fire Ruins Interiors Of 2 Vacant Houses

Flames gutted two vacant brick row houses at 730 and 732 1st st. sw. last night before firemen brought the blaze under control within an hour.

The buildings are owned by the Friendship Baptist Church at 734 1st st. sw. According to firemen, the blaze began in a rear shed, spread to the back porches, then to the interiors.

Neon 'No Left Turn' Signs Prove Success, Keneipp Says

The new neon "No left turn" signs installed recently at two downtown intersections have been an unqualified success, George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, declared yesterday.

The new signs were installed about a month and a half ago at 14th st. and Constitution ave. nw., and at Pennsylvania and E. Executive aves. nw.

The neon signs, which replaced the usual printed warning, flash on only during rush hours or on such special occasions when left turns are banned. They answer the complaint that many of the orthodox "No left turn" signs are hard to see.

Keneipp said policemen stationed at the two intersections have reported to engineers in his department that the neon signs have been very effective. The public, too, has been high in its praise of the new signals, Keneipp added.

Keneipp said it will not be possible to buy more of the neon signs this year, but said he hopes his department will be able to install more of them in the future, depending on the amount of money his department receives in the budget and the backlog of signal light work.

3 District Bills Sent To Truman

Area Fire Protection Setup Approved; 3 Measures Also Passed by Senate

Congress yesterday gave final approval to three District bills, including one for a coordinated fire protection setup in the metropolitan area.

The bills now go to the White House.

The fire protection bill was drafted by fire officials of the District and adjoining area. It would clear the way for the District Commissioners to make agreement for mutual assistance with nearby Maryland and Virginia communities.

It would give the metropolitan area a force estimated at about 125 companies with close to 4400 men. Committee members said the bill is needed to permit effective civilian defense plans.

A major effect would be to assure District firemen the protection of hospitalization and retirement benefits while on duty beyond the District line.

Under existing law the city's firemen are not entitled to hospital and retirement benefits if injured on out-of-town runs.

The House also approved and forwarded to the White House bills to facilitate distribution of surplus property to schools, and to revise the law on membership in the boxing commission. One feature of the boxing bill would let Boxing Commission Chairman Harvey L. Miller draw pay for that job plus retirement pay as a Marine Corps officer. Another provision lets one member of the commission be a resident of the metropolitan area rather than requiring all three to live within the District.

Insurance Measure

In other actions the Senate approved and sent to the House bills to let District insurance companies invest in obligations of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and to revise the District architects registration law.

The Senate also passed, and then withdrew its approval of, a bill to boost from $600 to $1000 the amount the court can allow from a deceased person's estate as a preferred charge for funeral expenses. Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) blocked the bill after it had passed by winning a move to reconsider it. The action kept the measure on the Senate calendar.

Other District bills are slated for Senate action today.

State Details Georgia Ave. Widening Plan

Baltimore, Aug. 8 (AP) — The State Road Commission has decided to break up the widening of Georgia Avenue from Silver Spring to Glenmont into three projects and hopes to start work on the first by September 23.

The new plan was worked out by Governor Lane in conference with officials of the road commission and the Attorney General's office.

Almost five miles of the Georgia Ave. extension, a main artery in and out of the north corner of Washington, is to be made into a dual expressway, with two 12-foot lanes in each direction and a 10-foot strip between the opposing streams of traffic.

The conferees said there may be too much interference with traffic if the whole section were put under contract at one time.

The first project will run from Colesville rd. in Silver Spring to Seminary rd., 1.2 miles. Bids will be asked August 29, they will be opened September 13 and an order to proceed with the work will be issued about September 23.

The second project, two miles long, will run from Seminary rd. to the Viers Mill intersection. It will be put up for bids October 1 and the bids will be opened October 30.

The 1.6 miles from Viers Mill to Glenmont will be advertised for bids late in November, with the contract being awarded before the end of the year.

Hink Resigns Falls Church Council Post

'No Reason' Given; Successor May Be Chosen on Monday

The resignation of Falls Church Councilman Carl H. Hink was confirmed yesterday by Mayor Albert M. Orme.

Hink, of 226 S. Virginia ave., was appointed to the council last February to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Mandley T. Rust.

The 36-year-old Hink, a Falls Church real estate man, gave "no reason" for his resignation, submitted just before a meeting of the city council Monday night, according to Mayor Orme. His successor may be chosen next Monday night by the council, which is empowered to fill unexpired terms under a charter provision.

Meanwhile, Falls Church School Superintendent Irvin Schmitt said yesterday that he will ask the city school board on Wednesday to authorize a $25,000 temporary loan, in case money from the sale of $700,000 worth of school bonds is not available within the next ten days.

The bonds originally were scheduled for delivery, and payment in full, on August 15.

However, a temporary Fairfax Circuit Court injunction forbidding City Manager Harry Wells to sign the bonds will remain in effect until a hearing August 15, thus delaying delivery of the bonds.

Mrs. Helen Regan, Falls Church School Board chairman, yesterday described the school bonds as "just the object of this fight." She referred to the recent controversy, when Acting Manager Roy Dunn was replaced by City Manager Wells.

"It's unfortunate that the people in town are making this a political football," she declared.

Jail Inmate's Term Upped By Ring Theft

In one of the briefest trials in Municipal Court history, George Lee Turner, 25, of 431 3d st. sw., was found guilty of petty larceny yesterday.

Turner, who is currently serving a 30-day term on a drunk charge, was accused of stealing a ring and wrist watch from Oneda Hamilton of 415 Temple ct. sw., on July 31.

Detective Sergt. Richard Moore of the general assignment squad, learned Monday that the watch had been pawned for $5. He followed the trail farther and it led him to Turner in his cell at the District Jail.

Taken before Judge Armond W. Scott yesterday, Turner declared:

"Judge, I don't want a lawyer. I don't want a jury. I want to be tried right now. I took the watch."

Judge Scott was equally brief.

"120 days," he said.

Polio Total For Area Up By 10 Cases

Ten new poliomyelitis cases were reported in the Washington area yesterday, bringing the year's total to 120.

Two new cases—both small children—were reported in the District. This brought Washington's total to 58 as compared to 18 at this time last year. The District Health Department said the new cases included: A 3-year-old boy of the 4200 block of 8th st. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital August 5, and a 2-year-old girl of the 3900 block of Tunlaw rd. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital August 6.

In Prince Georges County, three new cases were reported, bringing the county's total to 20 for the year. County health officials said they include: (date given is that when the person first became ill) A 5-year-old boy of the 800 block of 61st ave., Capitol Heights' admitted to Children's Hospital (August 3); a girl, age unknown, who lived at Andrews Air Force Base, admitted to Walter Reed Hospital (July 28); a 7-year-old boy of the 1100 block of Roth dr., Forest Heights, admitted to Children's Hocpital (August 6).

The Montgomery County Health Department reported its thirteenth case, an 8-year-old girl of the 6500 block of Ridgewood ave., Chevy Chase, who was admitted to Children's Hospital August 7.

In Virginia, both Arlington and Fairfax Counties added two new cases, bringing Arlington's total to 9 and the Fairfax figure to 17.

Arlington health officials said new cases there included: A 30-year-old man of the 700 block of S. Florida st., admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital August 3; and a 4-year-old girl of the 1100 block of S. Emerson st., admitted to Children's Hospital August 6.

New Fairfax County cases included a 3-year-old girl of the 1100 block of Jackson Court, Falls Church, admitted to Children's Hospital July 22, and a 7-year-old boy of the 1900 block of Elmwood dr., Falls Church, admitted to Children's Hospital July 27.

15th Polio Death, In Wythe County

Wytheville, Va., Aug. 8 (AP).—Wythe County's polio toll jumped to 140 cases today, the State Health department said, with the report of seven new cases in the epidemic-ridden area of 23,000 persons.

Another death, that of a 14-year-old boy in Speedwell, hiked the figure attributed to the county by State health officials to 15, accounting for most of the State's 23 polio fatalities this year.

Three of Wythe County's new cases were in Wytheville—the county seat of 5500 inhabitants which so far has had 82 cases of polio. All the cases in both the county and town have occurred since July 1.

Gallinger Plan Approved In Principle

$70,000 Project May Quadruple Capacity For Out-Patient Care

District Commissioners yesterday approved in principle a $70,000 plan to increase by four times the out-patient clinic facilities at Gallinger Municipal Hospital.

Acting District Budget Officer William G. Wilding said the commissioners had asked for more detailed data before asking Congress for funds. But the information should be prepared in time to include the $70,000 request in a supplemental appropriation bill now before Congress, Wilding said.

Dr. Joseph F. Fazekas, Gallinger chief of staff, said the money would be used to hire additional doctors and nurses. The clinic, chief purpose of which is to give post-hospital care to chronically ill indigents, and keep them from relapsing back into a hospital bed, now handles 18,000 visits a year Fazekas said. The $70,000 could increase this to about 75,000 visits a year, he said.

Principle reason for seeking the funds, Fazekas said, is to provide the municipal hospital with facilities in which it is almost totally lacking. Heretofore, no funds have been appropriated specifically for out-patient care at Gallinger, Fazekas said, and present out-patient treatment facilities there are less than at almost any other large municipal hospital. Boston's municipal hospital is equipped to handle 300,000 visits a year.

Another reason for seeking the funds now, Wilding pointed out, is that Congress cut from $745,000 last year to $635,000 in this year's budget the amount the District can pay private hospitals to care for indigents. This means there will be less money to pay private hospitals for the out-patient care they had been furnishing, Wilding said.

Fazekas said it is planned to move the clinic from an inconvenient location half a mile from a bus stop to the first floor of the isolation building closer to transportation facilities.

Arson Charged In Maryland Barn Blaze

Prince Georges County police have charged a former tenant with arson in the $10,000 burning of a barn early Saturday on the farm of Oden Bowie, near Mitchellville.

Held in the Marlboro jail in lieu of $1000 bond is Peter Leo Marshall, 41, of Mitchellville. A hearing on the charge is set for Friday in Marlboro Police Court.

Marshall, police said, was a tenant on the farm about two years ago.

The fire destroyed the barn and its contents of grain and farm equipment.

Bowie is the grandson of former Governor Oden Bowie, who held Maryland's top executive position from 1869 to 1872. He is the sixth generation to farm the estate, Fairview, on Defense hwy.

Hyattsville To Seek Central Postoffice

Hyattsville City Councilman W. Wilson Spicknall has been named chairman of a committee to push for establishment in Hyattsville of a central postoffice for metropoitan Prince Georges County.

Others who will serve with Spickall are T. Howard Duckett, president of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co.; Architect Paul H. Kea, Smith H. Purdum and Councilman W. Stanley Machen, Jesse S. Baggett and Hiram L. Lawrence.

Carpenter's Death By Hanging In Hyattsville Jail Revealed

A 62-year-old Colmar Manor carpenter hanged himself with his belt early Sunday in a cell in the Hyattsville jail, Prince Georges County police revealed yesterday.

Police Superintendent Ralph W. Brown asserted there was no attempt by police to cover up the incident. He pointed out that both Lieut. Roscoe C. Sines, station commander, and Lieut. Charles N. Thomsen, chief of detectives, were absent from the station over the weekend. The former returned from vacation Monday and the latter had the day off, Brown explained.

The prisoner was identified by police as Leonard R. Tate of 4201 Newton st., Colmar Manor. He was arrested at 11:30 p. m. Saturday on a warrant sworn by his wife charging him with assault with intent to kill.

Discovery of the body was made about 7 a. m. by a jailer. Tate was pronounced dead at 7:10 a. m. by Dr. John T. Maloney, county medical examiner, who issued a certificate of suicide.

Tate's wife, Helen, told police after his arrest that he held her at bay in their home for more than an hour Saturday night at the point of a .22-caliber rifle, threatening her life if she moved.

Jury Quizzes Lt. Shimon In Probe of Wiretapping

Hour of Testimony; Brewster Secretary Appears; Senators Get Report Today

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Washington Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon spent nearly an hour yesterday before the Federal Grand Jury investigating wiretapping.

Shimon's appearance came after the Grand Jury took testimony in the morning from Mrs. Frances Dustin, administrative assistant to Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.).

Mrs. Dustin presumably was to testify about the payment of about $100 to $125 made by Senator Brewster to Lieutenant Shimon for expenses in checking up on a man shadowing the Senator in 1947. Brewster told reporters he made the payment, but that the envelope containing the money was handed to Shimon by Mrs. Dustin.

Senator Brewster, at the Capitol, told reporters Mrs. Dustin had been subpened Saturday at her summer home in Maine, by two United States marshals, after two FBI men on Thursday had been sent to locate her.

To Save Witness a Trip

Brewster said he wasn't blaming the FBI, but that he himself had told the Justice Department early Thursday where Mrs. Dustin was—at the summer home near Dexter, Me., where she has spent vacations a number of years. He said his own appearance before the wire-tapping grand jury last Thursday had been voluntary to save Mrs. Dustin the trip.

A third grand jury witness yesterday was Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives. He declined to discuss what went on.

Their appearances came on the eve of a special Senate Committee's opening meeting today at 3 p.m. to get the Police Department's report on Shimon's alleged wire-tapping activities. Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, is scheduled to deliver the report.

Core of the report, according to published accounts is that one of Shimon's aides tapped the telephone of Howard Hughes, millionaire plane manufacturer, while his war contracts were being investigated by a Senate committee headed by Brewster.

Fay's Aide at the Time

Shimon at the time was assigned as an investigator to the staff of the United States Attorney's office. About a year ago he was transferred to routine police duties after a police probe of his alleged wiretapping work.

Lieutenant Shimon was sun-tanned and dapper in a brown suit when he turned up yesterday

He had been on vacation at Nags Head, N. C., and visited New York.

After his appearance, he said the Grand Jury had told him to return Thursday morning.

He was asked whether he would stand on his constitutional rights before the grand jury and he said what he did would be done upon advice of his lawyer, Robert E. Lynch.

Reporters asked Shimon whether he had ever engaged in any wiretapping here.

"You know I can't answer that question," said Shimon. "I am a witness before the grand jury and I can't discuss this case in any way."

Summoned by Barrett

Shimon, however, cleared up the questions raised by his visit Monday to Police Headquarters when he entered the building through a side door. He said he went to headquarters in answer to a telephone summons from Chief Barrett.

Shimon said he left headquarters immediately after learning Major Barrett was tied up at the time. He said he checked in yesterday with Major Barrett. He said their conversation was limited to

County Library Bill Stands, Says Council

In Montgomery

County Plans Jr. College For Negroes

Montgomery County will soon establish the first Negro junior college in Maryland.

The new school was authorized yesterday by the Board of Education at its session in Rockville, Md. The county will pay $6000 and the State $3000 toward the cost of operation.

The junior college will be located in the new George Washington Carver High School now under construction north of Rockville. It will have only night classes in the beginning.

Dr. Edwin Broome, county superintendent of schools, said 40 students are expected to be enrolled in the opening classes. The exact opening date has not been determined, but must await completion of the high school building.

Parlett L. Moore, now principal of Lincoln High School, Rockville, which will become the junior high school when Carver is opened, will be dean of the junior college and principal of the new high school.

The high school was scheduled for completion in time for the opening of school in September, but probably will not be ready until October or November.

The school board also approved having all employes of the school system X-rayed for tuberculosis as recommended by the executive committee of the teacher association.

William B. Evans, jr., former principal of Clara Barton School, and Miss Hannah F. Hanway, from New York State schools, were named elementary school supervisors. Miss Marguerite M. Stone of Arlington, Va., was named research assistant.

Final approval was given for a contract to Victor N. Judson, of Silver Spring, the low bidder, for construction of the new 6 classroom, all-purpose room and kitchen Laytonsville Elementary School at a cost of $169,411.

The Montgomery County Council yesterday indicated that the controversial library bill would not be vetoed.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase branch of the American Association of University Women and other groups had urged the council to veto the bill, contending that it would cause double taxation and might imperil the erection of a suitable library for the Bethesda area. A public hearing was held by the council on the request to veto.

Thomas C. Kelley, who acted as president pro tem of the council yesterday in the absence of Frederic P. Lee, said he personally opposed the bill. He added, however, that considerable discussion in secret sessions of the council showed no change in the 5-2 stand of the council in favor of the bill. No good could come from moving to veto the bill since he was certain he could not summon four votes to affirm a veto, Kelley said. Councilman A. S. Selby was the other councilman who opposed the bill.

Councilman Harold F. Hammond, only member of the body running for reelection, said he felt the law was entitled to a trial run and that the new Council could change it if there were any defects.

Kelley said that all of the 37 bills enacted at the May legislative session will become law August 15 unless vetoed.

Also at yesterday's meeting:

The resignation of Malcolm H. White as a member of the County Personnel Board was accepted. White resigned because he is a candidate for the County Council.

The Council adopted a resolution urging the State Roads Commission to widen and resurface Route 24 from Henderson's Corner to the Frederick County line.

Appointment of Miss Agnes D. Lima, 1704 Kilbourne pl. nw., and Miss Jeanne Cain, Takoma Park, as public health nurses, and Nikita Botkin, Hyattsville, as a multilith machine operator was approved.

Glenn Dale Meeting

A meeting of citizens of the Glenn Dale area will be held Friday at 8 p. m., at the Glenn Dale Fire House to organize the Glenn Dale Citizens Association, Mrs. Charles W. Kienast, temporary chairman, announced yesterday.

Marlboro Pike Rezoning Plea Runs Into Snag

A decision on rezoning of a 15-acre tract on Marlboro pike in Hillside for commercial use was deferred yesterday by the Prince Georges County commissioners until a projected rerouting of the highway there is completed.

Application for the reclassification was made by Stanley B. Frosh and Charles F. McKay. A request for a special exception to permit operation of a drive-in theater there was withdrawn last week.

The tract is located on a curve and adjoins the old Maryland Club Gardens property. It is now used as a golf driving range.

Also at yesterday's meeting:

Linden Briscoe, clerk to the commissioners, said bids on the widening and straightening of Marlboro pike are to be opened by the State Roads Commission in Baltimore on August 14. Work on the project is expected to begin soon thereafter, he said he was told by the roads commission.

Mrs. Ralph J. Sheffer, director of the County Animal Rescue League, asked the commissioners for assistance in handling the extremely large volume of calls received by her agency.

The number of calls—more than 700 in June—is more than she can handle from her home, she said. Her request for office space and a telephone was taken under advisement.

A new truck to pick up stray and unwanted animals was authorized for the Animal Rescue League by the commissioners.

They also directed Briscoe to confer with Supervisor of Assessments Louis W. Kutsch to find a suitable piece of county-owned land on which the league could construct an animal shelter.

Staunton-to-Richmond Highway Mail Seen

By The Associated Press

The way is cleared for highway postal service between Staunton and Richmond, Va., when and if a post office bus become available Representative Abbitt (D., Va.), said yesterday.

Post Office Department objection to use of a bridge over the James River at Bent Creek, Appomattox County, has been removed, Abbitt said. The bridge has been considered too weak to support one of the 28,000-pound Post Office buses. It has been refloored and strengthened.

Jury Hears Lieut. Shimon

instructions from Barrett to go to the grand jury.

Shimon said he received later yesterday morning from a U. S. deputy marshal his formal summons to appear before the grand jury.

Shimon said his leave ends Saturday and he will then report for duty to the Second Precinct.

Mrs. Dustin, who lives at 717 Dale dr., Silver Spring, Md., spent about 10 minutes in the jury room.

Senator Brewster said Mrs. Dustin came from her summer home in Maine, and has returned there.

He was surprised at the formalities undertaken to locate her after he had told the Justice Department where she was to be found and that she was available if wanted.

Congratulates The Post

Senator Brewster congratulated The Washington Post on its story of August 5 by Chalmers M. Roberts reporting that Senate Democrats had Brewster in mind as a primary target when they arranged for the wire-tapping probe. Brewster heads the GOP Senate campaign committee.

Brewster said he did not know what is in the Police Department report on Shimon.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, said he has no doubt Shimon will be called to testify.

Neely said today's session with Chief Barrett would be "exploratory."

Neely said he understood the name of Henry Grunewald figured in the wire tapping report. Grunewald, who lives at the Westchester, and has an office in the Munsey Building, is reported sought for testimony to the grand jury. The Westchester reported he was believed to be out of town.

Heard Statement

In another development Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) said he had heard the statement that his name was mentioned in the Shimon report.

Macy headed the House committee that conducted a number of investigations in 1948, including a probe of black market practices in the Washington area automobile business.

Macy said when his committee started its work, he called on Major Barrett, as well as heads of various Federal agencies, for the services of investigators.

In response, Representative Macy said, Lieutenant Shimon came to his office and discussed various matters. Macy said he did not ask Shimon to do any wire tapping and that to his knowledge none was done for the committee. He said it was the only meeting he recalled with Shimon.

Md. Voting Registration Ends Friday

Montgomery County voters were reminded yesterday that Friday is the last day for new residents to register in order to vote in the primary elections September 18.

The League of Women Voters offers assistance in registration. Aid also may be obtained at the Democratic Victory Committee headquarters at Wheaton, Md.

Late registrants must go to the office of the Supervisors of Election in the Broslus Bldg., Rockville. Persons who have registered as "declined" may change their affiliation and register as party members until Friday also.

Inormation on registration procedure may be obtained by calling Mrs. Howard Smith, Rockville 2716, or Mrs. Philip Thorson, Oliver 7654, both of the voters' service committee of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters.

Only persons registered as either Republican or Democratic can vote in the party primaries. Persons who decline to affiliate with a party can vote only in the general elections.

Louis Loebl, FBI Agent, Dies at 71

Louis Loebl, 71, one of the country's oldest and ablest G-men, died yesterday at the George Washington University Hospital.

Mr. Loebl

He had worked on many notorious cases in his 33-year career, including the Teapot Dome scandal the Lindbergh kidnaping, and the five-million-dollar G. Bryan Pitts embezzlement.

A stocky scholarly looking man, Mr. Loebl was about as far removed from the public conception of an FBI agent as a man could be.

By presidential decrees, he had been exempted from the retirement statutes several times to allow him to continue as a special agent after he passed the retirement age or was about as far removed from the retirement age of 62.

Mr. Loebl was at his desk Saturday in the Washington field office, where for the last few years he had been acting as the chief liaison officer between the FBI and the State Department.

In the Lindbergh case, Mr. Loebl helped to convict Gaston B. Means, who called himself "the world's greatest detective," on charges of defrauding Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean of $104,000. Means, who died in Leavenworth Penitentiary, induced Mrs. McLean to hire him on the grounds that he knew where the Lindbergh baby was.

In the Pitts embezzlement, Mr. Loebl helped convict the executive chief of the F. H. Smith Co., an old investment real estate firm, for conspiring to embezzle five million dollars from the corporation he headed.

Mr. Loebl was a native of Hungary and received a law degree from the University of Budapest before coming to this country shortly after 1900. He joined the FBI in 1917 in St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Loebl's wife died in 1947 and he had been in failing health since then. He lived at 1601 Argonne pl. nw.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

The Rev. Knox Dies; Pastor In Arlington

The Rev. Ulysses Simpson Knox, pastor of the Columbia Baptist Church in Falls Church, Va., for 26 years, and more recently at the Bon Air Baptist Church in Arlington, died Sunday at Arlington Hospital.

The Rev. Mr. Knox, of 5654 N. Sixth st., Arlington, was in his sixties, a member of the family said. He had been ill about 3 weeks with a heart condition.

A native of Summersville, W. Va., he was graduated from the University of West Virginia, and later received his theological training at the Crozier Seminary, near Philadelphia. He preached in New Castle, Del., and Jersey City, N. J., before he came to Falls Church in 1917.

In 1943 he was named pastor of the Bon Air Church.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Bessie M. Knox, and three sons: The Rev. Weston W. Knox, pastor of the East Highland Park Baptist Church, Richmond; the Rev. Kenneth W. Knox, pastor of the Kensington Baptist Church, Kensington, Md., and Herbert C. Knox of 232 Broad st., Falls Church. Four grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today in the Columbia Baptist Church, with Masonic burial later in New Castle.

Mrs. Jane Peake, 100, Lifelong Resident of Alexandria, Dies

Mrs. Jane Frances O'Bannon Peake, 100, the oldest member of the Washington Street Methodist Church and one of the oldest residents of northern Virginia, died Monday at her home, 117 West Monroe ave., Alexandria.

She was the widow of the late Joseph M. Peake, who operated a grain and feed store for many years at King and Alfred sts., Alexandria. A native of Alexandria, she lived there her entire life. She celebrated her 100th birthday last April.

Surviving are two sons, J. Fred and Neville H., both of Alexandria; three daughters, Mrs. John L. Arnold, Kayser, W. Va., Mrs. W. G. Middleton, Trenton, N. J., and Miss Rose Peake of Alexandria.

Funeral services will be held today at 11 a. m. in Demaine's funeral home, 5205 Washington st., Alexandria, with private burial services at The Plains, Va.

Dr. Seth Cole, Retired D. C. Dentist, Dies

Dr. Seth Eugene Cole, 81, for 45 years a local dentist, died yesterday of a heart attack at his home at 639 East Capitol st. He had been in ill health for several months.

Dr. Cole

Born September 15, 1868, in Willoston, Vt., Dr. Cole came to Washington at the age of 16.

As a young man he worked as a machine apprentice at the Washington Navy Yard before deciding to become a dentist.

He enrolled in Columbian College (now George Washington University), where he was graduated in dentistry in 1905.

His entire dental pactice was at the same address—639 East Capitol st. He continued in limited practice up until about a year ago.

Dr. Cole married Edith Mahon of Annandale, Va., in 1894. Mrs. Cole died in 1898.

Until he stopped his practice, Dr. Cole was a member of the District Dental Association. He was a member of St. Mark's Episcopal Church. He was a past grand master of the Harmony Lodge of the Odd Fellows.

Dr. Cole was a member of the Washington Light Infantry, a predecessor of the National Guard.

Survivors include a son, Dr. Eugene Cole, also of 639 East Capitol st., a general practitioner and surgeon, and a grandson, Eugene Thomas Cole, of the same address.

Funeral arrangements had not been made last night.

Man Trapped In Store, Held For Break-In

Police surrounded White's Super Market, 910 3d st. ne., shortly before 5 a. m. yesterday after receiving a call that someone had been seen scrambling through the front door transom.

Pvt. C. W. Chaillet of the Ninth Precinct stationed himself in the darkness in the rear of the store.

Suddenly he said, there was a loud noise and a grating over a rear window fell to the ground. A man was on top of the grating.

The man made one turn and saw several policemen coming up the alley. He turned again, started to run, and ran right into the outstretched arms of Chaillet, the policeman said.

The man identified himself as Charles W. Mayo, 25, of 4731 B st. se. In Municipal Court, Judge Armond W. Scott held him in $1500 bond on a charge of housebreaking for action of the grand jury.

Claude Ingalls Dies; Oregon Editor, Publisher

Corvallis, Oreg., Aug. 8 (AP).—Claude Eugene Ingalls, 72, Oregon editor and publisher long known for his scathing paragraphs, died at home today.

William Quinn Dies; Pioneer Auto Builder

Funeral services for William J. Quinn, sr., 61, who helped develop the first auto carburetor and auto radio, will be held at 9 a. m. today at the Mount Calvary Church, Forestville, Md. Burial will be in the Washington National Cemetery.

Mr. Quinn had been working in San Juan, Puerto Rico, for the past three years and only returned here last Thursday because of ill health. He died Saturday after a heart attack on a golf course.

He worked with Walter P. Chrysler on the development of the carburetor while both were employed by the American Locomotive Works in Pittsburgh in 1910. In 1915, he helped design the Liberty Motor and when this country entered World War I, he built a special Liberty truck.

In 1922, he went to Detroit to help design the first auto radio for the Hupmobile Co. Six years later he opened a refrigeration and air conditioning business here. He worked during World War II placing units in military installations.

Surviving are his wife, Teresa; two sons, William J. of Suitland and Joseph L., who is with the Navy in Korea; a daughter, Mrs. Donna C. Duncan of Washington, two brothers and two sisters.

John Dawson Dies; Ex-Railroad Employe

John A. S. Dawson, retired Pennsylvania Railroad employe and a resident of Washington for more than 45 years, died Tuesday afternoon at his home, 3421 20th st. ne., following a brief illness.

Mr. Dawson, descendant of a prerevolutionary Maryland family, was born in Mayo, Anne Arundel County, 76 years ago. Before moving to Washington he was captain of a Chesapeake Bay steamship. His wife, Eva Cox Dawson, also a native of Maryland, died last February.

He is survived by four sons, Alan B., John L., and James McL. of Washington, Wilson F. of Arlington, Va., one daughter, Mrs. Edward J. Kelly of Alexandria, Va., and five sisters, Mrs. Algie Davis, Baltimore, Mrs. Vinton Nichols, of Washington, Mrs. Glanville Jones, Annapolis, Md., and Mrs. William Collison and Mrs. Harry Collison, both of Mayo, Md.

Mr. Dawson was a member of Federal Lodge No. 1, F. A. A. M. and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Funeral services will be held at the Lee Funeral Home Friday at 2 p. m.. He will be buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

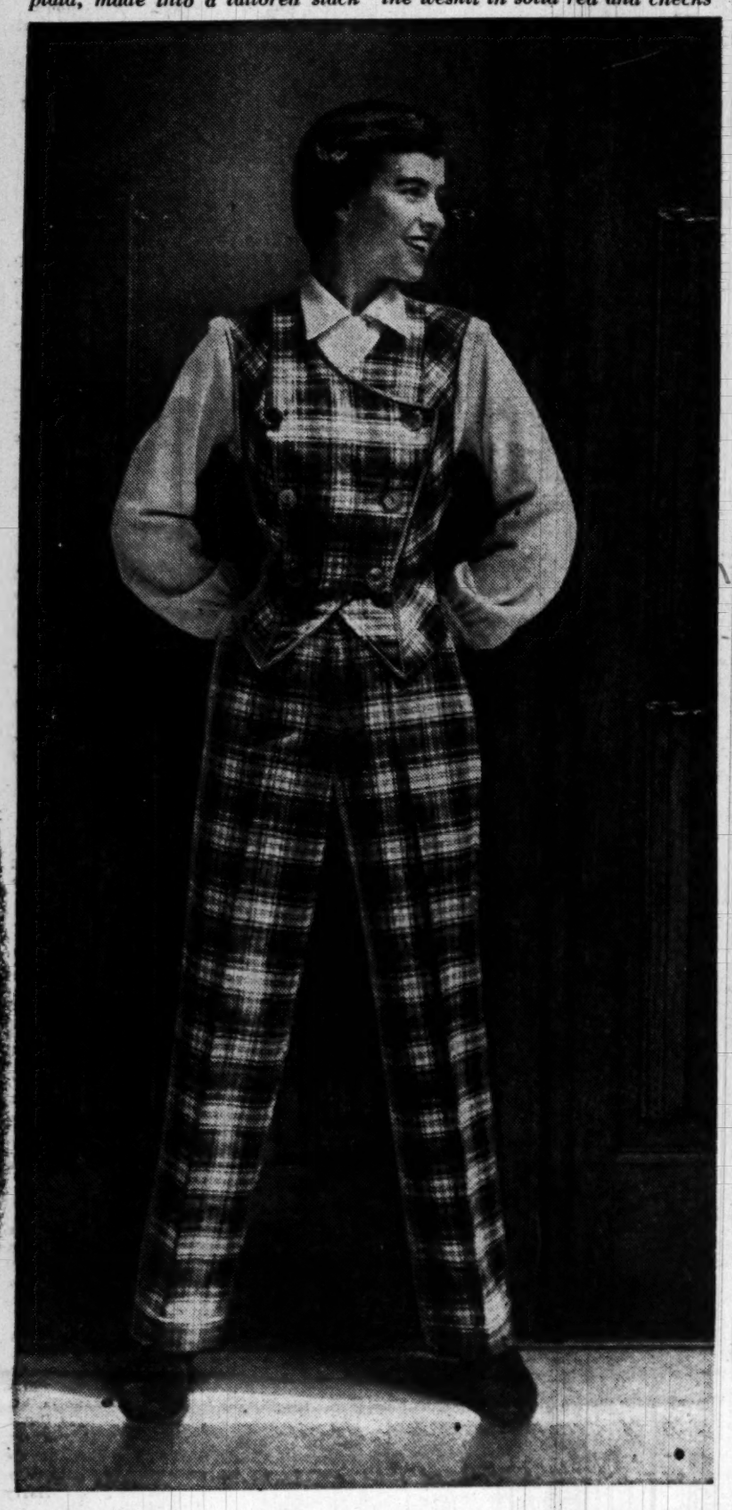
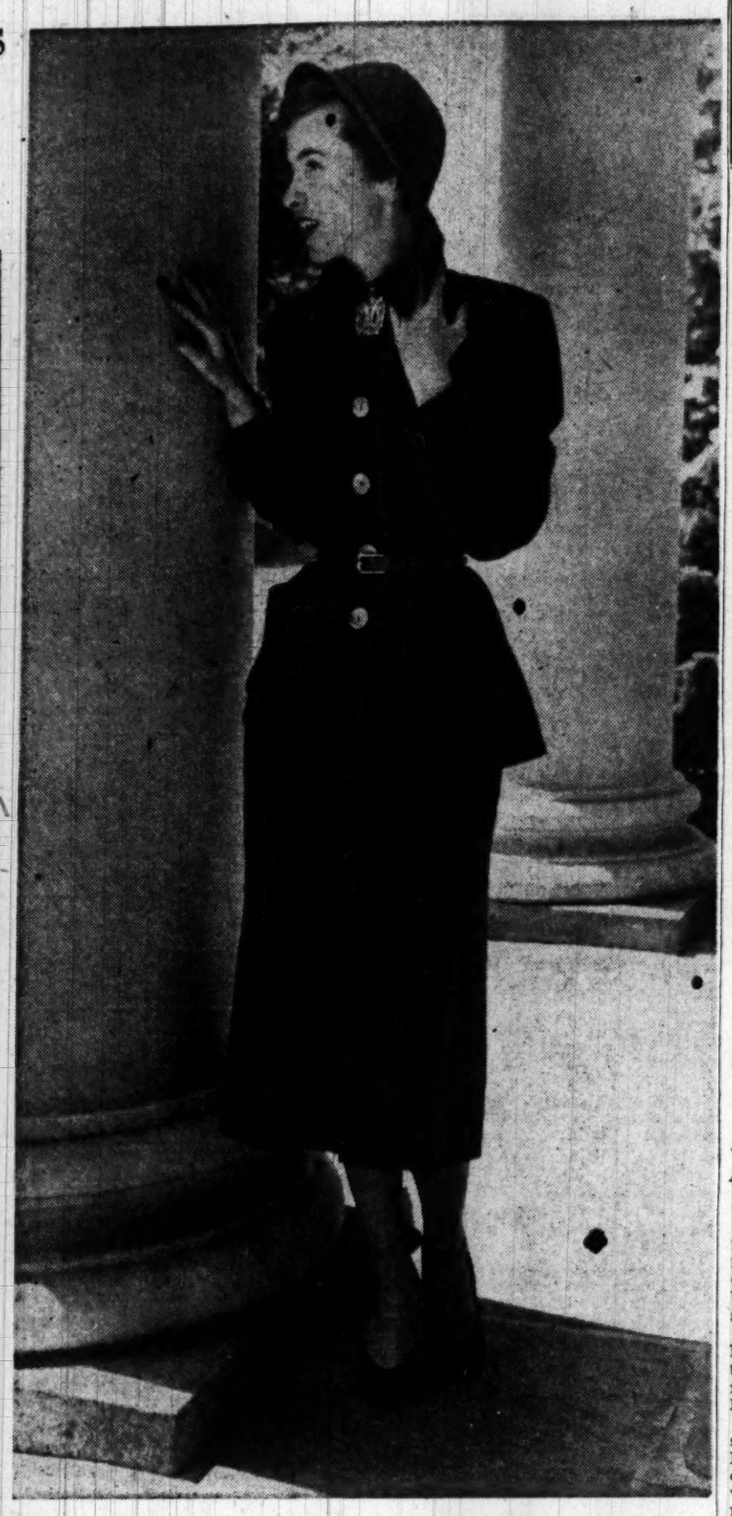
Something From the Boys

THE MEN'S CRAZE for tartans has inspired some of 1950's most colorful feminine fashions for college. Take the one pictured below—it's a bold, bright woolen plaid, made into a tailored slack suit, consisting of trousers and double-breasted weskit. To further variety, and in line with the vogue for separates, the slacks come in gray, chestnut and navy; the weskit in solid red and checks





CASUAL skirt and jacket outfit for campus wear is interpreted in tartan plaids, carrying such time-honored clan names as Campbell, Chisholm, MacLamonde and Cardif. The jacket, which may be worn with or without a belt, is available as well in solid scarlet, kelly green, copper, and checks; the skirt in matching checks. In sizes 10 to 18, both these ensembles are available in the college shop at Raleigh Haberdasher

Paris Gowns Now Available On a Budget

By Sally Swing

Paris, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Women no longer will have to have a bulging wallet to buy a Paris creation (it says here).

Five of Paris' top designers each have made available seven models to be mass-produced by French clothing firms.

The 35 models—including wool dresses, suits, coats and glamorous evening gowns—range in price from $60 to $160.

Each garment will bear a label "Couturiers Associes" (Associated Dressmakers), plus the name of the designer.

The designers taking part are Jacques Fath, Robert Piguet, Carven, Paquin and Jean Desses.

At a fashion show yesterday, representatives of these houses watched their first audience closely. Wary at first—some of the dresses are ultra simple—the women later applauded enthusiastically.

Americans May Get Their Chance

ALTHOUGH American women are not yet in on this fashion bonanza, the president of the Associated Dressmakers, Jean Gaumont-Lanvin, is presently negotiating with United States manufacturers.

The clothes will be put on sale throughout France, in French colonies, in Belgium and in six Swiss towns.

To give the wearer the Parisian look, most of the clothes are incompletely finished, and it will take one or two fittings before each garment can be worn. The cost of the fittings is included in the original price.

Materials Used Are the Finest

ONE OF the least expensive dresses shown was a gray flannel morning dress, with the new high neckline, three-quarter cuffed sleeves, two rows of three buttons on the midriff and a skirt with front fullness.

Materials used to make up the low price collection are some of the best France has to offer—from Rodier, Lesur and other luxury fabric manufacturers.

The most expensive dress shown, designed by Jacques Fath, was a cocktail-dance dress of black pleated organdy. At the waist was a large apple-green mousseline sash. The top, very bare and strapless, could be covered by a black velvet bolero, converting the dance dress into a suitable dinner ensemble.

Coats were in shaggy camel-hair, popular this fall. Some were fitted, some large, in colors ranging from beige to bright greens and reds.

The couturiers, knowing that women everywhere love a simple black suit or dress, also presented several varieties of this basic necessity.

Miss McMullin to Be November Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. McMullin of Bethesda announce the engagement of their daughter, Winifred Marie, to Paul L. Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Sullivan of Takoma Park. The wedding will take place in early November.

The bride-elect attended St. Patrick's Academy and her fiance attended the University of Maryland. During the war he served with the United States Marines overseas.

Catholic Daughters Fete Miss Buckley

A dinner party was given at the Bethesda Country Club recently for Miss Margaret J. Buckley, newly elected supreme vice regent of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Court Our Lady of Lourdes gave the party to honor Miss Buckley who is an active member of the Bethesda Court. Mrs. Raymond Denahan presided, and the Rev. John T. Sweeney, court chaplain, reviewed the work of the organization.

Mrs. Edward Porter presented Miss Buckley with a silver mesh evening bag in behalf of the 40 members present. Mrs. Ernest Burgdorf was in charge of arrangements.

Tobé Says...

Since buying a winter coat is a serious affair for most of us—and one that we do not indulge in every year—the question of color is all important.

This fall both coat fabrics and coat styling lend themselves particularly well to color, smartest new colors for both dress and dressy casual coats are the oxford grays, which are as universally useful as black; taupe, "pantomime," also easy to wear.

In more casual coats, there are wonderful new bright shades of orange, brassy gold, purple and red—also a whole range of tawny rusts and browns.

Black is basic of course—but it's those other colors that look new.

Engaged to Wed Midshipman Crews

The engagement of Miss Janet Ruth Thompson to Midshipman Alvan Macauley Crews is announced by her father, Richard S. Thompson, and Mrs. Thompson of Indianapolis, Ind.

The bridegroom-to-be is the son of Mrs. Esther Crews of Washington and a member of the United States Naval Academy Class of '51. His great grandfather, Capt. Hardin Beverly Littlepage, attended the Naval Academy, too, but he resigned to join the Confederate Navy after his native Virginia seceded from the Union.

Before entering the Academy, Midshipman Crews attended Bullis School in Silver Spring, Md. His fiancee is a student at the University of Maryland.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Says Her Man Is Fine, Honest, Industrious, But She Has Spells of Hating Him; Thinks a Month Away From Him Might Help, But Feels Wish Unfair

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband was an excessive drinker during the early years of our married life; and at first I was kind and patient, hoping he would quit eventually. But when he didn't I began to have feelings of violent hatred for him, and these hostile feelings began to predominate, due I think to his complete indifference to what he was doing to our marriage.

It has always been difficult for us to talk things over, as I get hysterical and he gets angry and obstinate. But to shorten the story, he now drinks very little—an average of two highballs a week. In earlier years I would have been happy as a lark about such moderation, but now I find that even this little sends me into a frenzy of hate for him.

Of late, the feeling comes over me that I would be all right if I could get away from George for a month or two, but that wouldn't be fair to him. He is a fine person, honest, hardworking, etc., and at one time I loved him dearly. I have tried to control my hate feelings, and would do almost anything to overcome them, but don't suggest "drinking together" as a remedy. I tried that, and we only become more antagonistic when we both are drinking.

She Was Happy in His Absence

GEORGE was away on a business trip not long ago and I felt such relief during his absence. For the first time in years I slept well and awoke each morning feeling fit and refreshed. But as the time for his return drew near, the old mood of sick apprehension settled in on me, and I knew I would be wondering again, day after day, if he would have liquor on his breath and I didn't want him to come back.

I feel I need psychiatric help, but cannot afford it; and I am undergoing menopause—could that be my trouble? If I don't get real help soon I fear I may take off for parts unknown. Please give me some insight, help or hope. A. G.

Chronic Anxiety Engenders Hatred

DEAR A. G.: It seems to me you are projecting at George a lifetime's accumulation of hatred, 90 percent or more of which was submerged in your unconscious, like a floating mine of explosives, before you ever knew him.

In the first phase of marriage when you were being sweet and kind about his intemperate drinking, you were half acting and half day dreaming, not realistically taking the measure of problem conduct. You were being the good little parasite, careful to give no offense to the supporting host; and also you were under the spell of your blind expectations that marriage, and a husband, would magically provide all that you needed to make you happy and secure.

The pretense snapped when your blind expectations encountered frustration. Then your real nature came to the fore—angry, frightened, savagely demanding, like an infant protesting neglect. And the tension stepped up into feelings of violent hatred for George because his aloofness (about drinking) stirred buried memories of other perilously indifferent "supporting" relationships in your early life—say from birth to three or more years of age.

Too Dependent, and Resents It

YOU are inordinately dependent upon George to give your life substance and order, and you are pathologically insecure due to childhood conditioning. You resent this handicapping status, which prevents zestful living and self-reliant social interests, and yet you aren't really aware of being thus fettered and galled. Also you resent George's air of being less hamstrung, although you sense that he is childishly attached to you in many ways, too, and for this you despise him. Why? Because of your latent cynical self-contempt, which poisons your estimate of a sex partner.

You would profit by analytic rather than psychiatric help. And just a few sessions with a specialist, maybe three talks, an hour each, might drain off the worst of your fears, thereby eradicate the roots of hate, and turn the tide towards lasting improvement. For remedial reading, I recommend Agnes Sanford's "The Healing Light," Macalaster Park Publications, St. Paul, Minn. M. H.

It's Easy To Set Your Own Hair

Setting your hair in waves or curls is easy and can be done at the rate of 20 pin curls in five minutes, according to Dolly Reed, if you follow her directions in McCall's for August. Hair should be brushed flat and pushed forward for waves, she says, and brushed up for curls:

"Comb damp-dry hair into general outline of hairdo. Slide edge of comb back from forehead; turn so teeth point up and separate lock from rest of hair in a small square.

"Comb lock back and up so that the hair is smoothly separated, not bunched unevenly. This is what makes an evenly curly or wavy hairdo. Take up enough hair for fat curls.

"Hold end of lock with thumb and forefinger and wind from the scalp around finger of other hand, making a perfect circle. Wind all pin curls in the same direction.

"When lock is wound almost to tips of hair, slide curl off finger and hold it with thumb and forefinger of right hand, tugging it up and out to lay ends flat and make curl smooth.

"With left finger, lift lock forward and up. Then slide pin curl fat to the scalp in its blocked space. Slip in clip and release. Continue around head making curls all the same size."

Hot-Weather Supper

Serve a puffy omelet with a tomato sauce for a hot-weather supper. To make the omelet separate the yolks from the whites, then beat both and fold together — whites into yolks. Don't turn the omelet when the bottom is cooked, just cover the skillet until the top is firm.

Exercise for Trimmer Hipline

By Ida Jean Kain

IN MEASUREMENT charts, hips stop at 39 inches. But alas, in real life, hips continue to spread. Exercise can put a stop to that, and what's more can slim off two bulky inches merely by restoring tone to those fleshy muscles that pad the hips and enlarge your size.

All hip exercises are good, but some are better. Here's one that brings in the right angle and a back swing . . .

Position: Lying on right side on floor, head pillowed on arm, left hand braced on floor close to chest. Legs should be straight down.

Movement: Bring left leg forcibly up toward chest, bending the knee and touching knee to left hand. Shoot leg back down and, with knee straight, swing leg away back . . . and hold. And work the left leg like a piston—flex knee, shoot straight down—and swing leg back. Once you get the rhythm, this is fun. Repeat six times, putting action into it. Change sides and repeat with the right leg.

Variety of Exercises

IT'S ALWAYS A GOOD PLAN to alternate vigorous exercises with less active types. So this time, sit back and roll . . .

Position: Sitting on floor, leaning slightly backward until weight is resting on the exact spot that needs slimming. Arms should be out at sides, behind body, ready to act as propeller and brace.

Jog the Circulation

Position: Lying on back on floor, legs stretched down, arms out at sides at shoulder level.

Hints to the Homemaker . . .

To separate two glasses which have stuck together, dip bottom glass in warm water and at same time put cold water in top glass.

For safety's safe, paint the bottom step—only—white. It's a good way to avoid accidents.

For hard-to-open screw-type jar lids, wrap an elastic band around lid tightly several times. This will give you a firm hand.

Cover labels that are apt to be handled with wet hands—especially those on medicine bottles, —with a cellulose tape to keep dry and prevent blurring.

Work in World's Trouble Zones

No Job Too Tough for United Nations Women

By Adelaide Kerr

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Women are working for the United Nations today on the fringe of battle zones, in political hot spots, in jungles, deserts and remote mountain hamlets.

More than 200 of them are scattered around the globe in jobs that call for fast thinking, courage, stamina and diplomatic skill. Some handle tough administrative jobs. Some distribute emergency supplies in disaster areas.

Doctors, nurses and health workers shuttle by jeep, raft and donkey through mountain and jungle areas infested with wild animals and snakes. Some live in primitive huts and walk from village to village to do their work. Others do office work for United Nations missions sent to mediate international disputes that could lead to war.

The U. N. does not send women where shells are flying or subject them to undue risk or danger. But it does dispatch them to some very rugged spots and their bosses have high praise for the way they handle their jobs.

Ten women are now working with the Korean Commission in the division stationed in Tokyo, including British Sheila Whitley and Matilda Mizibrocky, a Canadian. Two more are enroute with other secretarial reinforcements.

American Working In Jerusalem Now

VIRGINIA SHERWOOD, New York City, and Irene Landry, a Swiss, are among 12 women working with the Palestine Commission in Jerusalem. There are nine in Athens, working for the special committee on the Balkans. There are others with U. N., missions in Somaliland, Libya and Pakistan.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, who was acting mediator in Palestine, says the women who served "were indispensible members of the U. N. peace army out there; they contributed greatly to the successful completion of the mission."

UNICEF (the U. N. arm devoted to bettering conditions for children) and the World Health Organization (which fights disease around the world) have corps of women doctors, nurses, and administrators working in many countries.

Anne Laughlin, Topeka, Kans., heads UNICEF's mission in Bulgaria. Helena Glassey, Washington, D. C. directs the UNICEF mission in Yugoslavia and Gertrude Lutz (Swiss) directs its operations in Poland. All work with government authorities and travel a lot in overseeing distribution of shoes, clothes, blankets, medicines and food for school lunches. Patricia Palmer, Canadian-born UNICEF public relations director for Europe, travels constantly in Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Austria and Poland.

Trains Midwives In Borneo Jungles

IN THE jungle area of Brunei in Borneo, Ida Simmons (British) is training midwives, whose childbirth superstitions go back thousands of years, in modern obstetrical methods. Miss Simmons travels up and down river from village to village in an outboard motor boat, teaching and demonstrating feeding in an effort to cut down the high infant mortality rate.

Dr. Jean Orkney (British) journeys through India and Pakistan by jeep, helping set up child care centers and training local nurses.

Miss Cordelia Trimble, Peoria, Ill., UNICEF Chief of Mission in Ecuador shuttles back and forth between Colombia and Ecuador distributing blankets, soap and food to earthquake victims.

Why are these rugged jobs given to women?

"These women got them because they are so capable and highly respected," says Maurice Pate, director of UNICEF. "They were chosen in some cases instead of available men."

The World Health Organization has added public health nurses to practically all its teams traveling far afield to show people new methods to combat tuberculosis, malaria, venereal disease and polio.

Ten are attached to teams in India, Pakistan, Egypt and Thailand. One team working in the Terai district of Northern India was frequently menaced by leopards and tigers that prowled out of the jungle. One of its nurses shot a bear and other wild game.

Nurses Labor Under Primitive Conditions

OTHER nurses are working in hospitals, clinics and health centers in Greece, China, Sarawak, Borneo, South Korea and Haiti and Ethiopia, often laboring under the most primitive conditions. Nurses in Ethiopia found hospital equipment so limited that some wards lacked washbasins and pitchers.

Nurses working in Europe on anti-tuberculosis and anti-venereal disease campaigns travel by raft, jeep and donkey or trudge through the mountains bearing their medical supplies on their backs. Others journey by horseback through Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco to fight tuberculosis.

The Food and Agriculture Organization has several women nutritionists in Middle East and Central American countries helping devise plans to make women more efficient homemakers with better understanding of nutrition. The International Refugee Organization has women escort officers and nurses on ships shuttling displaced persons to new homes.

Any husband who has ever muttered about the extent of his wife's luggage would rejoice to see the U. N. women's traveling kits. They are pared to absolute essentials—including extra nylons and lipstick, of course.

Menu Has Latin Flavor At Outdoor Buffet Fete

By Marie McNair

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE and Mrs. Edward G. Miller, jr., who returned just recently from a holiday at Mexico's Acapulco, were entertained at a buffet supper last evening by the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen. Small tables were set out on the broad terrace and in the garden, and guests ate arroz con pollo along with salads, cold meats and the usual buffet fare.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, was in the company. Also there were the Uruguayan Ambassador and Senora de Dominguez-Campora, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina, the Peruvian Ambassador Fernando Berckemeyer (Senora de Berckemeyer is in California), the Panama Ambassador and Senora de Herbruger and the Venezuelan Ambassador and Senora de Pocaterra.

Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez, the Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Leslie Biffle and Representative and Mrs. Mike Mansfield were others in the group. Then there were the Charge d'Affaires of Ecuador and Senora de Moscoso; the Charge d'Affaires of Nicaragua and Senora de Schick; the Dominican Ambassador to OAS and Senora de Rodriguez; Chief of Protocol John F. Simmons; Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert Barrett; Albert Nufer, United States Representative to the Inter-American Economic and Social Council, and Mrs. Nufer; State Department's Thomas Mann and Mrs. Mann, and Charles Hauch and Mrs. Hauch.

Embassy House Guests at Party

THE MINISTER-COUNSELOR of the Dominican Embassy and Senora de Cohn were present and the two additional Minister-Counselors, Dr. Dario Contreras and Otto Vega, were there with their wives. Still others were Prince Guido Pignatelli without his Princess, who is away; Dr. William A. Morgan (Mrs. Morgan is in Hot Springs), and Mrs. Blake Clark, without her husband who's on another roving assignment in Denver.

Mrs. Mitchell Palmer and Herbert May, William S. Culbertson, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas were other guests. So were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Newman and Albert Reeves.

The Ambassador's brother-in-law and sister, the Dominican Charge d'Affaires in Bolivia Arturo Calventi and Senora de Calventi, were in the party, and other members of the family visiting at the embassy include the Ambassador's mother, Senora de Thomen; Senora de Arredondo, mother of Senora de Thomen; her aunt, Senorita Grecia Lluberas, and Victor Thomen, nephew of the Ambassador.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller, incidentally, have no complaints against a Washington summer. They've sent Rebecca to camp in Vermont, have their younger daughter, Jane, with them here. Living in the Nelson Rockefeller house on Foxhall rd., the Millers are surrounded by trees and gardens; have a vista of the city from a terrace, and enjoy their own tennis court.

The house, first owned by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker, was remodeled and enlarged by them. The left wing is the original frame farmhouse. The Bakers built a central unit and then added a right wing creating a long, low, rambling English type country house.

New Round of Parties Begins

OPENING gun in the round of parties planned for Anne Elizabeth Davis and Charles Camalier before their marriage September 6 was fired yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. H. Loy Anderson.

Mr. Anderson, who will be an usher at the wedding, and Mrs. Anderson invited about 40 guests for cocktails in honor of the engaged pair. In the group were members of the wedding party and a few close friends.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT:

Gen. and Mrs. John N. Greely left yesterday to motor to New Hampshire to visit the General's sister, Miss Rose Greely of Washington, at Stillwater, her home at Conway Center. After 10 days they will go to Sconset, Mass., and return to Washington early in September.

Mrs. George L. Harrison of New York and Washington, and her sons, Cary T. Grayson and Gordon Grayson, are in Saratoga Springs for the remainder of the racing season.

Comdr. and Mrs. O. G. Sexton of Bethesda, Md. are on a holiday at Virginia Beach and are at the Cavalier Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. King, who are vacationing on the West Coast, are at the Santa Barbara Biltmore in Montecito, Calif., for a few days.

NLRB Lawyer Takes Bride

The marriage of Miss Ruth Hendricks to Hyman A. Schulson of Washington took place yesterday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Hendricks, at Greacen Point, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

The bridegroom, an attorney with the National Labor Relations Board, is the son of Rabbi and Mrs. Solomon Schulson of Milwaukee, Wisc.

Rabbi David de Sola Pool of Shearith Israel Congregation in New York performed the ceremony. The bride was escorted by her uncle, Edgar J. Nathan, jr., and was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Robert Weber was her sister's only attendant.

The bride is an alumna of Horace Mann School, Ann Reno Institute and the Teachers College of Columbia University. She has taught at the New York Association for the Blind and at Greenwich House Child Care Center. Mr. Schulson, an Air Force veteran and member of the District of Columbia Bar Association, was graduated from Brown University and the Yale School of Law. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa honor society.

Honeymoon in Bermuda After August Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard I. Goodman, whose marriage took place August 1, are honeymooning in Bermuda. Mrs. Goodman is the former Miss Shirley Molenof, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Molenof. The ceremony took place in the Beth El Synagogue with Rabbi M. Jevenson officiating.

After August 15 Mr. and Mrs. Goodman will be at home at the Queenstown Apartments.

Alumnae Picnic Sunday

Recently elected officers of the College of St. Catherine Alumnae Association have planned a family picnic for members of the District of Columbia Chapter on August 13 at 5 p. m. in Rock Creek Park, picnic site 8-C. The new officers are Mrs. Francis S. Key, president; Miss Marie Pierce, secretary; Miss Matilie Sweeney, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Sudmeier, program chairman.

Warrenton Expects Crowd for Horse Show

Labor Day weekend in Warrenton, Va., will be crowded with visitors there for the fifty-first annual Warrenton Horse Show.

This year, in addition to the traditionally colorful Judges and Exhibitors Ball and the equally gala Volunteer Firemen's party, Warrenton residents are making plans to honor participants in the Olympic Try-Outs, a new feature of the Horse Show program.

Mrs. Melville Bearns is chairman of the entertainment committee. She will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Arundel, Capt. and Mrs. J. T. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Juan Ceballos, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hinckley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Kaltenbach, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory S. McIntosh, Mrs. Kennedy Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. King Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Fredrik Wachmeister, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Wilbur and Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill.

Special Sunday Dessert

PAMPER the family with this wonderful dessert next Sunday! It's a Mocha Refrigerator Cake, delicately blending the toothsome flavors of coffee and chocolate. You can make it the day before, keep it in the refrigerator until serving time.

MOCHA REFRIGERATOR CAKE

2 packaged sponge cake layers
1 cup strong coffee
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 package chocolate pudding mix
1 cup evaporated milk
Walnut meats

Split sponge layers through, making four thin layers. Prepare pudding mix, using coffee and evaporated milk, combined, as the liquid. Press one of the cake layers into a medium-sized mixing bowl. Add 1/3 of the pudding, another cake layer, and so on, ending with the fourth cake layer. Chill several hours or overnight. Unmold on serving plate. Swirl whipped cream generously on top and sides. Garnish with whole walnut meats. This recipe makes eight servings.

Ask Anne

Little but Mighty Are Tots Who Inspire a Big Batch Of Anne's Correspondence

"CHILDREN are certain cares and uncertain comforts," glooms an old English proverb. And while few will agree with that, it's a sure thing that the little dears cause many letters to be written to this column!

DEAR ANNE:

My little nephew poured a bottle of mineral oil on the mattress and made a stain about 18 inches in diameter. It did not come through on the other side.

Is there any possible way to get it out? If not, is there any place in Washington that would clean it without rebuilding the whole mattress? The mattress is new and has been used only about 4 or 5 months and I would hate to rebuild the whole thing if it is not necessary. I would appreciate an early answer since we have the mattress propped against the wall until we hear from you. B.P.S., Washington.

If the oil has soaked down into the felting, the only real way to get rid of it is to have the mattress renovated and some new felting put in.

However, since plain mineral oil (unlike vegetable and animal fats) doesn't turn rancid, I wonder if it makes much difference whether you get every smidgen of it out. Of course, you'll want to remove enough so that it won't be soaking through and staining sheets. Turning the mattress over will help, since the oil hasn't gone all the way through.

You can get a good bit of the oil out this way. Place clean white blotters, paper towels, or several thicknesses of cleansing tissue on top of the stain and press with a warm iron. Change the blotter or paper as it becomes stained. Continue this treatment as long as it is effective. Then clean the surface by shampooing with an upholstery cleaner. Turn a fan on the spot or place it in the sun to dry thoroughly afterward.

If you prefer, you can have the mattress shampooed by a mattress-cleaning firm.

DEAR ANNE:

We have a plastic wading pool for our young daughters. Should I leave it inflated for the winter, or deflate it and fold it up? What precautions should we take to keep it from holes or other damage during the winter?
Mrs. Wolfe, Winchester, Va.

A plastic toy of the type which can be deflated should be stored flat for best results. After deflating, wash carefully with mild soap, rinse and dry. Then—and this is the important part—dust all over generously with talcum powder. This will prevent sticking and tearing. Store in a dry, cool place, using ordinary precautions to avoid rips from nails. No other holes are likely to develop if the plastic is clean and well dusted.

DEAR ANNE:

I have a davenport covered with red plastic leather and I wish to know if there is any way to stop the plastic from tearing around the buttons which run down the center of the davenport. My son has pulled on these so often that they are now loose. If there is an inexpensive way to fix them at home, I would certainly like to know of it.
Mrs. R. W., Glen Burnie, Md.

If your son is still fascinated by these plastic buttons, I know of no re-inforcement strong enough to withstand a child's tugging. However, if the damage isn't too extensive yet, you might be able to stem the tears around the buttons by narrow strips of cellophane tape, which would be virtually invisible. Larger tears would probably require a professional upholsterer's attention.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me the best way to remove a stain of red oil furniture polish from a light gray carpet? This was spilled about two weeks ago, and I did use soap and cold water to sponge off the stain. Will it be necessary to send the rug out to a cleaning establishment or can I clean this at home?
Mrs. D. F. M., Washington.

Furniture polish stains are among the most aggravating of all. Very often, such spots are insoluble because the polish contains a dye that has an affinity for the fibers of the rug, and the chemical action necessary to remove the stain may leave the rug minus color as well.

First step, though, is to get rid of the greasiness of the spot. Use a non-inflammable dry cleaning fluid for this. Apply with an eye dropper to the stained area and sponge with a clean white unstarched cloth.

When the oil is out, get to work on the color. Prepare a pan of hot water. In it, place an unopened bottle of denatured alcohol to raise its temperature. Apply the warm alcohol to the stain with an eye dropper, a drop or two at a time, and carefully sponge with a clean white cloth from the outside in to the center. Repeat as often as necessary.

DEAR ANNE:

How can I get iron wax out of a dress? Please, I'm desperate!
J. L., Washington.

Get as much of the wax out as you can by scraping with a dull knife. Then place the stain between a couple of blotters (clean, white ones), pieces of cleansing tissue, or paper towels. Press with a warm iron. Then sponge with carbon tetrachloride or some other cleansing solvent to get out wax still embedded in the fibers.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Melba Toast — Coconut Ice Cream — Beverage

PEACH CHUTNEY

Ingredients: 1 quart peeled, chopped peaches, 1 onion (chopped), ½ cup raisins (chopped), 1 cup vinegar, ¾ cup light sirup, 1 tablespoon white mustard seeds, 1½ teaspoons ginger, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 pod hot red pepper (chopped).

Method: Cook chopped peaches, onion, raisins and vinegar together until peaches are soft. Add sirup, mustard seeds, ginger, salt, and red pepper. Cook until thickened. Pour into clean hot jars and seal at once. Makes about 2 pints.

Sherry Cream Pie Recipe Made Its Owner Famous

MRS. Kenneth Coons of Tuscaloosa, Ala., is so intensely interested in food that she started an impressive cookbook collection, now numbering 25 volumes, and her own little herb garden.

But the best evidence of her skill in the arts of the kitchen is the elegant Sherry Cream Pie for which she is famous all over that southern town. Writing in McCall's for August, Katharine Best and Katharine Hillyer give you Mrs. Coons' recipe for this party favorite:

MRS. COONS'
SHERRY CREAM PIE

1½ cups crisp chocolate cookies, crushed
¼ lb. butter, melted
1 envelope unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold milk
3 eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
1 cup milk
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup sherry wine
½ pt. whipping cream

Crush the cookies on waxed paper with a rolling pin until very fine. Then mix crushed cookies with melted butter and pat the mixture firmly into a 10 inch glass pie plate, up over the edges, to form a pie shell. Now put the pie shell into the refrigerator for a 1-hour chilling.

From here on you have to "work like a cyclone." First, soften gelatine in cold milk. Second, put the egg yolks in the top of a double boiler, beat slightly, then add sugar, 1 cup of milk; stir well and cook for 10 minutes or until the mixture coats a spoon. Take off the stove.

Third, add the gelatine mixture, the salt and the nutmeg to the egg custard until gelatine is dissolved. Fourth, add your sherry wine, very slowly, stirring constantly, "If you add the sherry too fast," warns Mrs. Coons, "it might curdle."

Now, and fifth, the custard filling goes into the refrigerator to thicken. When thick, beat your egg whites stiff and whip the cream firm. Then, fold or mix in the stiff egg whites gently and again gently, fold in the whipped cream.

Your pie shell by now should be lovely and firm. Take it out of the refrigerator and fill it with the chilled custard mix, sprinkling the top with grated sweet chocolate or crushed cookies. Put it back into the refrigerator for a good long 8-hour session. Then, you can serve it to your fanciest friends.

Upside-Down Cake Can Be Whipped Up

Pineapple Upsidedown Cake is easy to make now that there are so many good white cake mixes on the market. Just melt six tablespoons of butter in an eight-inch square pan, then sprinkle with two-thirds cup of brown sugar and arrange a No. 2 can of crushed pineapple (well drained) over the sugar. Add the cake batter and bake in a moderate oven for 50 to 60 minutes. Be sure to let the upsidedown cake stand for about 5 minutes before turning it out on your serving plate.

To remove a molded gelatin dish dip the mold in warm (not hot) water for a few minutes, then invert on a dish, and holding both the dish and the mold together with firm fingers, shake loose.

Eggplant makes a filling vegetable accompaniment to meat or fish. To cook it quickly cut a medium-sized or large eggplant into one-quarter inch slices, dip in flour seasoned with salt and pepper, and saute in butter or margarine until golden brown on both sides.

"It was too good to be true!"
says MRS. LOUISE SIMMS
635 Mississippi Ave., SILVER SPRING

"Frankly, I didn't expect to be satisfied—but I tried No-Rinse Surf because I have a big wash and time is important. It was wonderful—the hours I saved, and all the back-breaking work of rinsing. I was afraid it was too good to be true."

"How my mind was changed—when I took the clothes off the line. They felt so soft—as soft as any wash I've ever had with three rinsings. They smelled nice and sweet, and looked so gleaming clean! Why, usually I have to use bleach to get shirts so white."

"I was practically dazzled by the brightness of the colored things . . . and I was delighted with the way they came up so crisp and fresh with ironing. No more long, hard washdays for me—I'm washing the easiest, and the best way, now—with No-Rinse Surf."

See for yourself with No-Rinse Surf—only washday product approved by U. S. Testing Co. for no rinsing!

Patchy Lips, Creeping Lipline Ruin Romance

Q.—Dear Brittany: I have lipstick trouble. It simply won't stay on. I re-do my lips a dozen times a day to keep them from looking patchy. What's to do about it?

A.—Dear Miss B: There's a new product just made for girls like you. It keeps lips smooth and lovely, without that patchy look. It's a base for lipstick to cling to. It ends the problem of frequent repaints and actually keeps color on your lips even though your lipstick wears off. The price only $1.00 plus tax. Just ask for LIP LIFE BASE for lipstick at your favorite cosmetic counter. Not a drying liquid.

For more information about LIP LIFE and generous trial size, send name and address, enclosing 10 cents for postage and handling. State whether you use clear red or blue tone lipstick. Mail to BRITTANY CLARKE, Beauty Consultant, 1207-D West 6th St., Los Angeles 17, Calif.

Woman Called Ex-Red Is Forced Out of Job

Cincinnati, Aug. 8 (AP)—A woman described as once having been a Communist in a recent Washington hearing was forced from her job today by her fellow workers at the Formica Company, it was reported last night.

Esther Tice, named in a recent House Un-American Activities Committee hearing by a former United Electrical Workers Union official as a Communist "plant" who entered Formica to foster a strike, immediately filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board. She claimed "discriminatory discharge." Miss Tice was quoted by employes as saying Formica had fired her for "union and communistic activity."

Company officials declined to comment except to confirm that Miss Tice had left the plant. Fellow employes said they refused to work while she remained in the plant.

A former organizer for the independent United Electrical Workers Union, Miss Tice is to learn Thursday if Congress will cite her for contempt for refusing to say whether she was a Communist.

Miss Tice was described as a former Communist during a House Un-American Activities Committee hearing by Victor Decavitch, former president of UE District 7, covering Ohio and Kentucky.

Negro Applicant To Virginia U. Seeks Injunction

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 8 (AP). An injunction to prevent the University of Virginia from barring Negro students was asked in a complaint filed here today in Federal District Court.

The suit was brought on behalf of Gregory Hayes Swanson, Martinsville Negro attorney, for himself and "all other Negro citizens of Virginia similarly situated."

It was filed by four lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and two professors at Howard University in Washington.

Apple Men Hear Address By Sen. Byrd

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) predicted yesterday that within two weeks the Administration will ask Congress for about 16 billion dollars more for defense expenditures and arming European countries.

Byrd, one of the Nation's biggest apple-growers, made the prediction here in an address to the International Apple Association convention at the Statler.

The Senator told the apple men he expected the President to seek to increase the budget for Government operations this year to 75 billion dollars. On Monday he had declared that with $16,500,000,000 in recent requests, the President had asked Congress for a budget of $58,700,000,000.

Byrd called for large cuts in nondefense spending to meet the new defense expenditures.

He drew cheers from the apple men with his declaration: "Every single activity of Government is permeated with waste, inefficiency and extravagance."

Byrd vigorously criticized the Administration's domestic program. Its adoption, he asserted, would "commit us to a socialistic program from which there is no retreat."

But he pledged his support to President Truman in "all efforts to end this war in Korea."

The convention, with some 1000 representatives of various branches of the apple industry on hand, will hold its final sessions today.

Maryland Progressive Candidates Nominated

Baltimore, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Progressive Party of Maryland chose its candidates for governor and United States Senator last night.

About 70 delegates at the nominating convention here also adopted a platform calling for an end to the Korean war and admission of Communist China to the United Nations Security Council.

Louis J. Shub, a professional pianist of Baltimore, was named candidate for governor. Sam Fox, a Baltimore factory worker, was nominated as the party's candidate for the Senate.

Spinster's Death Still A Mystery

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 8 (AP).—A surgeon today said that an autopsy on a 74-year-old Danbury spinster who left her modest fortune to the physician attending her failed to disclose the cause of death.

Dr. Thomas G. Chiffelle, Yale Medical School pathologist, said that "perhaps" an investigation of the death of Miss Elizabeth M. Ayres should be pursued.

Meanwhile, Dr. Donald F. Gibson, 47, sole heir to Miss Ayres' estimated estate of $65,000 to $100,000, refused to testify at the inquest. The physician, who had interrupted his honeymoon with his bride of three days to appear under subpena, stood on his constitutional rights.

Dr. Gibson, who lived in Miss Ayres' home, was accompanied by David Goldstein, a lawyer he engaged last week after telling reporters he assumed he would be accused of murder. No charges have been filed against him.

Dr. Gibson and Mrs. Ann Wetmore, 40, his office nurse, were married last Saturday, the day after Miss Ayres' funeral.

Crew Fighting To Patch Hull Of Ship at Sea

New York, Aug. 8 (U.P.)—The crew of the Norwegian freighter SS Belfri fought to patch her cracked hull with concrete today to keep her afloat in gale-tossed seas until they can reach Newfoundland, a tortuous one-week journey away.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Dexter was sticking close by, ready to snatch the 50-man crew to safety if the Belfri breaks in two.

Winds of almost gale proportions were smashing head-on into the freighter and her condition is "critical."

The ship's general cargo of China clay soaked up much of the water pouring through the hull, clogging up pumps so badly that the crew had difficulty keeping ahead of incoming water. St. John's is the nearest harbor, 640 miles away.

Firemen Name Norfolk Chief State Leader

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 8 (AP).—The State Fire Chiefs' Association of Virginia today elected Fire Chief R. L. Woolard president. He succeeds Bristol Fire Chief Hugh R. Worley, who was named a member of the executive committee.

B. J. Padgett, fire chief of Alexandria, was elected first vice president; Danville Fire Chief John Long was named second vice president, and Roanoke Fire Chief W. M. Millins was reelected treasurer.

Reappointed to the executive committee were Petersburg Fire Chief J. N. Farmer, Martinsville Fire Marshal Clay A. Easterly, Lynchburg Fire Chief M. K. Evans and Franklin Fire Chief C. H. Dougherty.

The election was held at the concluding session of the association's twentieth annual convention.

Wednesday morning the Virginia State Firemen's Association will hold the opening session of its sixty-fourth annual convention. Members will attend a dance at night and will compete in various contests and witness demonstrations by the Norfolk Fire Department on Thursday.

Wires Trap Woman When Auto Upsets

A 70-year-old woman was taken to Suburban Hospital in Bethesda in serious condition yesterday after her car overturned on Route 240, about three miles north of Rockville.

She is Mrs. Frances A. Thomas of Lebanon, Tenn., who has been visiting relatives in Chevy Chase.

Montgomery County police said the accident happened at about 9:30 a. m. They said Mrs. Thomas apparently lost control when the car ran onto a soft shoulder.

The car knocked down a light pole and three fence posts. High tension wires fell across the car, trapping Mrs. Thomas for about one hour until Potomac Electric Power Co. men arrived and removed the wires.

Suffers Five Broken Ribs

Her injuries included five broken ribs and lacerations of the right arm.

A Montgomery County dump truck, loaded with 8 tons of bluestone, and an automobile figured in another accident at 11:30 a. m. on Route 586, about a mile east of Rockville.

Police said the truck was driven by Edmund D. Biggs, 37, of 731 Easley st., Silver Spring, and the auto by Strod A. Bock of 13307 Okinawa ave., Rockville.

The truck was following the auto, police said.

Bock told police he was going to make a right turn into Halpine rd. Biggs said that when Bock pulled to the center of the highway, he assumed he was going to make a left turn. The crash occurred when Bock turned to the right.

The truck overturned and its driver's cab was crushed. Biggs was thrown clear and escaped injury. The only casualty was Biggs' 3-year-old daughter, Judith, who suffered a bloody nose.

Both drivers were charged with reckless driving and ordered to appear in Rockville police court August 10.

Meanwhile, two persons remained in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital following an automobile accident Monday near Port Tobacco, Md.

Tobacco Fete Princess

They are Miss Patricia Stewart Bowling, 22, of La Plata, who was a princess in the court of Queen Nicotina XIII during the 1947 Charles County Tobacco Festival at La Plata, and Richard N. Weeks, 21, of Rutherford, N. J.

They were injured when their car ran off the La Plata-Nanjemoy road, one mile west of La Plata, and toppled down a 30-foot embankment.

Both suffered fractured skulls and fractured jaws. Miss Bowling also received chest injuries and Weeks was believed to have internal injuries.

After first aid at Physicians Memorial Hospital in La Plata they were transferred to Georgetown Hospital.

Miss Bowling, who was still unconscious yesterday, is the daughter of Victor Bowling, who operates a hotel in La Plata.

Arlington Power Cut by Errant Steam Shovel

An estimated 60,000 Arlington residents were without electric power for 40 minutes last night because a runaway steam shovel ripped out cables in several places.

A spokesman for the Virginia Electric Power Co. said almost all of South Arlington was affected by the power blackout, from 5:25 to 6:40 p. m. Repairmen then began restoring service to particular sections affected and all but a few areas were operating by 8:45 p. m.

The steam shovel careened down hill a quarter of a mile on S. Glebe rd. before it finally stopped at 27th st. Its driver said he couldn't get the steam shovel into gear and the air brakes also failed.

Telephone lines were also damaged but it was not known how many telephone subscribers were affected.

Peanut Support Raised

The Agriculture Department yesterday said it would support prices of unprocessed peanuts from this year's crop at about $216 a ton—up $6 from last year.

Posse Hunts Slayer of 3 In Ozarks

Winona, Mo., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—A 39-year-old former convict, slayer of three persons, eluded pursuers and fled into the Ozark wilderness today.

State troopers called for bloodhounds, but rain handicapped the dogs in the search for William Harris.

He is charged with killing R. M. Fansler, 65, a neighbor; his son, Homer Fansler, 30, and Barbara Wanda Harris, 4, his own daughter.

His gunfire, which turned the inside of the Fansler home into a slaughterhouse, wounded two others. Elmer Nichols, brother-in-law of Fansler, was wounded in the hip by the same bullet that killed the child. The elder Fansler's wife was in critical condition.

Harris, his wife and two children moved to Eminence recently from St. Louis. Harris appeared at the Fansler home, where his family was visiting, last night after having been missing since Friday.

According to officers, the elder Fansler accused Harris of running off with 15-year-old Lola Fansler, his daughter. Lola also disappeared from her home last Friday and still is missing.

When Fansler accused him, Harris reportedly began shooting. It was a snap shot with a rifle, aimed at Nichols, that killed the baby. Harris forced his wife and Joyce Thomas, 16, a boarder at the Fansler home, into a car. He placed Barbara's body on the seat and drove away.

The car went into a ditch a mile and a half away.

H. B. Deweese, a farmer, went to help him from the ditch. Harris fired at him but missed. Dallas Crider, another farmer, drove up in a truck. Harris fired three shots at him, hitting the truck but missing Crider.

Early today, State troopers saw Harris riding in a truck driven by another man. Troopers fired at the tires but missed. Harris leaped from the truck, rolled down an embankment and fled into the brush.

New Potomac Span Indorsed By Alexandria

Alexandria City Council last night took the initiative for joint jurisdiction over a new Potomac River bridge to link the city with nearby Maryland.

The council authorized a three-man committee to apply to the State Highway Department for approval of the project, which eventually would be financed by the city, the State and the Federal Government.

Councilman James M. Duncan, jr., said the bridge approach would be located in the vicinity of 2d st., at the northern end of Alexandria's waterfront area. It would connect with Maryland near Suitland.

Duncan said his committee has prepared a tentative plan of highway approaches, but he declined to specify exact locations proposed in a preliminary study.

The State Highway Department would have to approve both the city's application and preliminary plans before a request for matching grants can be filed with the Federal Government, he said.

There is no available estimate of the ultimate cost of the project, according to Duncan. He said it was estimated about $600,000 would have to be spent for land rights ,one-third of which would be borne by the city.

When the job was first discussed more than a year ago, engineering officials predicted it would cost at least $10,000,000.

The council last night also approved a resolution calling on the Alexandria Water Co. to notify city officials and the local Office of Civilian Defense "immediately" in the event of contamination of the city's water supply.

The resolution, introduced by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley, stemmed from recent adulteration of the city water supply by disinfectant dumped by Army employes into a storm sewer near one of the water company's "feeder" streams.

Since late Thursday water in Alexandria has had an iodine-like taste and odor. Beverley charged that Health Department officials were not aware of the cause of the nuisance and erroneously attributed it to chlorine used by the water company during a changeover from the Barcroft reservoir to a new supply at Occoquan.

The resolution also asked the water company to "exert every effort" to prevent a repetition of the occurence.

War Speeds Up Radar Network In U. S., Canada

By the United Press

Work on an 85-million-dollar radar warning network around this country and Canada is being "speeded up" as a result of the Korean war, Air Force officials reported yesterday.

They testified at a closed session of a House Armed Services subcommittee. They would not say how soon the Air Force expects the job to be finished.

All but one or two sites for the radar warning stations have been selected, members said. They would not say how many of the stations have been built or started.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

YOU know those cute neighborhood kinds, whose parents give them singing, dancing, and skipping rope lessons from the time they're 3? Many an onlooker has wondered what happened to them as they grew up. Marlene Merrill, at the Casino Royal, has the look of a cute kid still—and virtually is just getting out of that classification.

With naturally arched eyebrows, a great big smile and a nose straight as a tomboy's, she appears less than her 20 years. Marlene does "modern acrobatics," which means she does aerials and other strictly acrobatic stunts, but combines them with the grace of modern dancing. Her somersaults in the air, without use of her hands, are unusual.

While still at the toddling stage, Marlene started studying tap, ballet, modern dance, acrobatic and piano. In her early teens, she began professional work—with mama along to take care of her. Now, at 20, she says she's been on her own for some time.

"Designs In Tap" is the billing of Abbott and Willis, two veterans of the stage who wind up the show at the Casino Royal. They do some fast moving about, with twirls a big part of their routines. The musical comedy touch is brought in with parodies of phases like the jazz age.

The most remarkable part of the show, though, is Johnny Aladdin. He's so very corny, so unbelievably corny, that after a few moments customers relax and laugh at the ridiculous lines. A comedian, he's also doing the emceeing while Bob Preble is away on vacation. With all the poise and good humor in the world, he cracks jokes about the foreign country named Texas, how many suckers there are in the audience, unemployed comedians—all the while pulling cards out of his sleeve and ropes from one pocket to another.

The current show will be there till next Tuesday night. Clinton (Deacon) Hobbs, the new bandleader, plays some very danceable music and sings. The Casino Royal is also one of the few places open on Sunday.

THE CLARENCE JACKSON group has gone on its way, and Buddy Hawkins has taken over in the Windsor Room. The newly redecorated room is following the same new policy that brought the Jones Brothers and the Jackson Brothers to that spot.

Buddy Hawkins' ensemble is mostly a harmony group. Four of the five sing together—with Hawkins doing the solos in a rich baritone. The pianist, Curtis Harmon, is a show in himself. He fills in most of the musical background, although there is also a bass fiddle and bongo drums. Harmon is a little man, who sits hunched over the keyboard, staring, while his fingers plop down like sticks—always in the right place.

Hawkins boys are best known in these parts for their recordings of "Please Tell Me Now" and "I'm Just a Dreamer." They seesaw between the "Shanty Town" type of song and the likes of "Because." They're currently working up some bop tunes, and will be playing them before they leave here.

Railroad Sued for Bias By Professor

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 8 (AP)—A Virginia State College professor today sued the Norfolk Western Railway, the Pullman Co. and an employe for $10,000 for forcing her to ride in an "inferior coach . . . . solely because she was a Negro."

Dr. Elizabeth Durham charged she suffered severe mental and physical injuries when she had to ride in a second-class coach on an N. & W. train last January after she had purchased first-class and Pullman accommodations.

The motion for judgment was filed in Law and Chancery Court by her attorneys—Martin A. Martin of Richmond and Reuben E. Lawson of Roanoke.

In the motion, Dr. Durham claimed that agents, employes and servants of the defendant firms, including L. L. Crowder of Richmond, required her to move from a first-class car to a second class-car while she was en route from Columbus, Ohio, to Petersburg.

Dr. Durham charged she was first forced to move to a coach occupied by white persons and then to another occupied by Negroes, although the defendant knew "she was a first-class passenger."

The second car, she said, was small, over-crowded, filled with smoke, dusty, dirty and drafty.

Alexandrians' Water Tasting A Little Better

Alexandria residents had some relief yesterday from the obnoxious taste in the city's water. The taste had been present since Army employes dumped a large quantity of waste chemicals into a storm sewer last week.

Officials of the Alexandria Water Company reported "definite progress" in their efforts to abate the nuisance, but said it still may be a few more days before the taste and odor of the disinfectant can be fully dissipated.

Howard C. Richards, president of the company, said progress has not been as fast as expected, but he predicted "it won't be long" before the water is normal again. He said the company was following its planned pattern of draining the filter plant reservoir and flushing out fire hydrants in an effort to bring a supply of unadulterated water into the system.

Despite the general feeling that the situation has improved, Richards said his company is still receiving numerous complaints. The taste is so strong it can be detected even in foods cooked with water. One irate resident complained it even ruined his favorite recipe for goulash.

Source of the nuisance was the Army's Quartermaster depot near Alexandria, where employes disposed of 15 barrels of disinfectant last Thursday. The storm sewer into which the solution was poured is only a short distance from one of the water company's "feeder" streams, and resulted in adulteration of the entire city water supply according to Richards.

NLRB Takes More Power From Denham

By The Associated Press

The "cold war" between the National Labor Relations Board and its general counsel, Robert W. Denham, got hotter yesterday.

The board rubbed out Denham's control over the Division of Administration, which includes 219 employes needed to run the two-headed agency. It thereby took back the authority it had delegated to Denham on Aug. 22, 1947, when the Taft-Hartley Act became effective.

Denham wasn't long in hitting back. He called the action "a matter of such insignificant pusillanimity" that he would not comment.

But he withdrew his appointment of Ida Klaus as solicitor and William Consedine as assistant solicitor to the board, returning them to the less exalted posts they vacated three years ago—writing briefs for him.

Miss Klaus and Consedine are the board's top legal advisers, and Denham indicated he thought they had something to do with plotting the board's latest moves against him. Solicitor Klaus would suffer a drop of about $2000 in her $10,750 annual salary. Consedine's $9200 would be untouched.

Miss Klaus and a spokesman for the board challenged Denham's authority over the solicitor's office, which was attached directly to the board. They said Denham's order would be ignored. The payroll office, they pointed out, now is under the five-man board, an important precaution taken earlier.

Denham still has control over about 900 of the agency's 1300 employes.

Women Seeking 'Peace' Told By U. S. We're Fighting for It

The United States, as part of the United Nations, is fighting in Korea for peace, a State Department official yesterday formally told a delegation of women seeking an end to the fighting.

Assistant Secretary of State John D. Hickerson met a small group of "American Women for Peace," part of about 600 who converged on the Capital yesterday. They urged immediate outlawing of atomic and hydrogen bombs, recognition of Communist China, and an end of fighting in Korea.

Hickerson listened to the appeals of the group, read a prepared statement in reply, and finally submitted to a brief question period.

"The United States is for peace," he said. "American soldiers and their United Nations comrades-in-arms are dying in Korea for peace and for the right of all peoples to live in freedom and without fear of aggression. The free world has finally learned that non-violence does not preserve freedom in the face of aggression and that the alternative is slavery."

Speaking with emphasis and obvious feeling, Hickerson said:

"The United Nations efforts in the past to maintain the peace without resort to force have been blocked by only one country and its satellites. In this connection, it is worth remembering that there would probably not be an atomic weapon in existence today if the USSR and the USSR alone, had not refused to accept the control plan adopted by an overwhelming majority of the members of the United Nations."

The delegates sang and heard peace speeches in closed session at the church, lunched there, and then split up into groups to carry their messages to President Truman, the State Department, and to the halls of Congress.

Acting chairman of the pilgrimage was Dr. Clementina J. Paolone, New York physician, who told a press conference the AWP was formed "spontaneously" on July 13 in New York. Its coming here was widely heralded by Communist and other left-wing publications.

"We can't suggest the ways and means to peace," she declared. "We only know we must fight for peace."

More specifically, in press statements issued under her name, she called on the United States to take the lead in The United Nations to "mediate the Korean conflict lest it spread into an atomic world war," and urged the recognition of Communist China, with admission of its delegates to U.N. and seats on U. N.'s security council, and the outlawing "of the use of atomic and hydrogen weapons."

Truman Signs Bill Authorizing Start On Atom-Age Navy

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday signed a bill authorizing a 350-million-dollar start on an atomic-age Navy, including the atom-powered sub, which would cost an estimated 40 million dollars. Three other experimental submarines, including one to be driven by a "closed cycle" engine that would require no air, will be built at a cost of 50 million dollars.

All told, the legislation would permit the Navy to construct 112 ships and small craft and to convert 29 other vessels.

The Navy's plans call for conversion of a cruiser to a guided-missile launcher, installation of snorkels—underwater breathing devices—on 11 submarines and construction of a "baby" sub about one tenth normal size.

Three other submarines will be converted into "sub killers" to track down and destroy other undersea craft.

How to Put Parents In the Booby Bin

By John Crosby

Crosby

THERE'S a children's program called "No School Today" emanating from Cincinnati (ABC WMAL, 10 to 11 a. m. Saturdays) presided over by Jon Arthur, who is known to the kids as "Big Jon." Big Jon is a great favorite with the kiddies and exercises a sway over them that any parent would envy. The other day Big Jon invited his small fry audience to lift their hands over their heads—I forget just why—and neglected to tell them to take them down again. Within 15 minutes ABC was flooded with calls from parents asking Big Jon, for heaven's sake, tell our children to drop their arms. Kids all over the country had their hands skyward and no amount of parental urging would get the hands down until Big Jon said so.

That's the best example to come to my attention so far of the unquestioned obedience radio (or television, too, for that matter) exacts from the junior members of the household. You tell little Oscar to trot off to bed and you will probably find yourself embroiled in argument. But if Milton Berle tells him to go to bed, off he goes.

I THINK this is the last straw. More and more during the last couple of decades, the parent has had to behave with the utmost circumspection to avoid bruising his child's psyche and thus permanently damaging the little so-and-so for useful activity as an adult. The more deference he paid the child, the less the child paid him. Now, it's come to the point where any clown on the radio demands and receives more respect than mummy or daddy.

You know where it's all going to lead, don't you? Ultimately, there will have to be a "Time to Get Up" program in which Uncle Don shouts out "Seven-thirty, my little friends. Old Sol—your friend and mine—is peeping behind the purple hills, bidding us to brush our teeth like good little boys and girls."

Then the day will come when Uncle Don will drink himself to death. The cheerful voice will be missing at 7:30. The Nation's children will sleep on and on and on. Did you ever hear of the Pied Piper? Well, his influence was limited to the aural range of his pipe. These electronic Pied Pipers have no limits at all.

OWEN LATTIMORE was on Martha Deane's program (WOR in New York). What he said is of no special note, since he's said it on so many other forums. But the response is. WOR got 521 calls—517 against Lattimore and 4 on his behalf.

It's the proportion that interests me. There is almost no issue in America today that will draw a 517-4 vote. The Communists in their sector of Berlin couldn't get that preponderance of the vote. Fact is, people don't vote that way. You could put any issue on the air—let's say, all babies should be exterminated by rats—and you'd get more people on your side than Lattimore.

Well, there's a document out now from American Legion headquarters in Indianapolis telling you how to do it. It does not refer specifically to Lattimore. You organize a lot of your friends and tell them to write letters or phone.

The telephone method is foolproof. Twenty people calling a station can tie up any switchboard (Just call. Hang up. Call. Hang up.) This system, the American Legion will be enchanted to find out, was devised by the Communist Party. The Communists were the first to tie up radio stations' switchboards whenever anything against the party line appeared on the air. The American Legion is now using Communist methods to prevent anyone except Indianapolis Republicans from appearing on the air. They're doing pretty well at it, too.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Tempus Keeps Fugiting, Even as You Read

"Heavens," sighed the lady at our house yesterday, "I'm so far behind with my work I don't know where to begin."

I found myself wondering why a housewife should ever fall behind in her work schedule. After all, keeping house is such a simple matter.

One opens a few cans several times a day, switches electric appliances on and off at the proper times, and calls the butcher to raise the roof about last night's roast. That's practically all there is to it.

I'll admit that I am not exactly up to date in my own work. My notebook is full of story leads that I haven't had time to investigate; my desk is piled high with unanswered mail; I'm three books and seven magazines behind in my reading; and I'm still trying to find time to build that extra shelf in the hall closet.

But it's different with a man. He spends eight hours of his day working, plus an hour for lunch. And eight hours for sleep. That clips 17 hours out of his 24 as "fixed overhead." No wonder he's always short of time.

I pulled out a pencil and did some more figuring. The average wage-earner spends, let us say, one hour each day in going to and from work. He spends another hour dressing, undressing, shaving, bathing and such. And still another hour in eating breakfast and dinner at home. So far, that's a total of 20 hours accounted for.

And latest surveys of our national radio and television habits show that the average household spends about four hours a day listening to the radio, while televiewing runs just under three hours daily.

These seven hours added to the 20 from before make a total of 27 hours out of each 24 that we can account for, without allowing any time for reading, writing a letter to the folks back home, going to the movies, bowling, a drive in the country or fiddling with your stamp collection.

Frankly, I think we ought to let well enough alone and quit trying to figure out where the time goes. While you were reading this you wasted enough time to make things worse than ever.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Housebroken part - Persian kittens, 6 weeks old." (Wisconsin 7508.)

"Two pairs of 8-week-old kittens, one black, one Maltese." (Woodley 4455.)

"Three beautiful, housebroken young kittens." (Franklin 0464.)

"Darling little Maltese kitten." (Ludlow 1-6104.)

LAST CALL

I'm leaving town for several weeks, and no Give-Aways will be published while I'm gone. If you want your Give-Away to be published this week you must mail it Today.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. D. Cooper, 2609 30th st. se.: I'm surprised to hear that a Post carrier boy was rude, but I suppose that in any large organization such things are bound to happen occasionally. Your report that he is no longer in our employ would make it appear that complaints were also received from other subscribers, and the necessary steps taken. Why not renew your subscription and give the new boy on the route a chance?

Mrs. W. W. Peirce, 57 Observatory Circle nw.: Thanks for the kind words; glad everything worked out okay.

Mrs. Mildred Brown, 1423 F st. ne.: You say you hope I'll be sleeping under blankets when I go on vacation, but my 14-year-old relative says he hopes we visit his grandmother in Cincinnati, his uncle in Louisville and his aunt in St. Louis. My experience with these cities is that visitors who come there during August are not likely to suffer from frostbite. What I ought to do is take the boy to Canada and let him send his relatives picture postcards from there.

SIMPLE SOLUTION

Mrs. E. A. Arneson of 5808 Dewey st., Cheverly, Md., complains that many of the grocers in her area aren't very cooperative about taking back empty softdrink bottles. She writes:

"The other day a grocer in the neighborhood refused to accept two cartons of bottles he had sold me just the day before. He said he had no space for them. I said he could put them right back in the same space he took them out of 24 hours before, when he charged me a deposit on them. But he just couldn't be bothered, so I took my bottles — and my business — elsewhere. I finally found one store that accepts empties cheerfully, and I'm now trading there. What can we do about grocers like these?"

It seems to me Mrs. Arneson has hit upon the only solution possible. There are plenty of merchants in Washington who "aim to please." Unfortunately some of them seem to need a little target practice.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

With the ladies rushing off to buy nylons again "before the hoarders get them all," I suppose it won't be long before leg makeup manufacturers are back in the chips.

VISITING HOURS

My hospitalized husband's improving . . . On chicken and turkey he thrives . . . With all of the nurses so charming . . . They ought to give hypos to wives.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Ideas Still Exceed Value of Dollars

By Drew Pearson

This is the last column I shall write before taking a couple of weeks off, and naturally I should like to make it a good one. But I don't feel so good about the state of the world or the state of the Nation, and I don't get much kick out of sitting back and Peglerizing.

Pearson

However, here are some contrasts affecting our future that the American public ought to know about, and which Congress will have a chance to rectify—if it wants to.

Between 1200 to 2000 Chinese students are going to Moscow every month to become indoctrinated in the ways of the Soviet. Twenty years ago the Russians planned their domination of China by setting up a special University of the Far East. The monthly trek of Chinese students across the trans-Siberian Railroad shows Moscow is still looking far into the future.

In contrast, the U. S. A. used to bring possibly 1200 Chinese students to this country a year, against what the Russians are bringing per month. Some of our Boxer-rebellion-educated Chinese went back to help run China, but for about 10 years almost no Chinese students have come here. When they do come they are heckled and hounded with red tape, including a bond that says they are undesirable yellow men who promise not to remain in the U. S. A.

Soviet 'Red Carpet'

The Russians recently invited the publisher of three Indo-Chinese newspapers to Moscow, where they gave him a special parade of the Red Army, let him interview Stalin, gave him the caviar-vodka-ballet treatment, and sent him back after having spent perhaps $50,000 on his entertainment. His newspapers promptly came out for Russia.

Meanwhile, in Washington we entertain such important Oriental visitors as the Mayor of Tokyo and members of the Japanese Parliament at cheaper hotels near the Union Station, where we allow only $10 a day to cover all meals, hotel room and everything else—all because a niggardly Congress has cut "the exchange of persons" budget to the bone.

These distinguished visitors are told that President Truman is too busy to see them, though Stalin takes time to see leading Orientals. However, many State and city officials—with the notable exception of Boston—have done their best to be hospitable, while Federal officials have done as much as they could within their penny-pinched budget.

In Latin America the President who is friendliest to the United States was educated at the University of Maryland and the University of California. He is President Galo Plaza of Ecuador, who also runs one of the steadiest governments in Latin America.

In Argentina, the Navy and Air Force are vigorously pro-American. Reason: Their commanding officers trained as cadets in the U. S. A. The Argentine army was partly trained by Germans and is anti-American.

In Brazil, the navy is also strong for the United States because its officers went to Annapolis. The Brazilian army, trained by Europeans, did not rush to join the United States immediately after Pearl Harbor.

Congress permits only a handful of Latin Americans to get a free education in the United States, but many come here at their own expense anyway.

On July 13, the State Department's appropriation for "exchange of persons" and other propaganda came up for debate, and a majority of the Senate voted to cut $2,300,000 off a budget already scaled to the bone. Those who fought for people-to-people friendship were Fulbright of Arkansas and Lehman of New York. Those who led the fight against it were McKellar of Tennesse, McCarran of Nevada, and Saltonstall of Massachusetts, with such Senators as Byrd of Virginia, George of Georgia, Taft of Ohio, McCarthy of Wisconsin, and Brewster of Maine supporting them.

Moral Mobilization

I should like to suggest, as I quit writing and leave for my vacation, that what the world needs today—and what we need—is hope. We live too much in an age of fear. We worry constantly. We worry about what happens after we reach the 38th Parallel in Korea, what happens after the Korean war is ended. We worry about arming to the teeth, taxing ourselves to the bone, living in a world where the atomic bomb may be dropped at any moment.

These are justifiable worries. They cannot be dispelled by a Pollyanna policy. The only way to dispel them, it seems to me, is by both moral mobilization and total mobilization.

The time is soon approaching, when, with both total mobilization and moral mobilization, we should notify Moscow that we are ready for any eventualities, and that we demand two things:

1. Total disarmament.
2. Normal interchange of peoples, books, newspapers; religious worship, and the end of the Iron Curtain.

In brief, the time has come to notify Moscow that when a heavily armed nation holds itself aloof from the world, refusing to let its people know the peaceful hopes of the world, constantly preparing them for war—then such unsocial attitude constitutes war—and we give them the alternative of changing their policy or dropping the bomb.

No city or community in the Western World would permit an armed citizen to build up an arsenal and constantly terrorize his neighbors. He would be locked up.

In this modern day, nations have become like people, and must be dealt with accordingly.

That is why dollars today are not as important as ideas.
